PRESIDENT HAS WON BATTLE

Doctors Insist Today That Crisis Has Passed and the Worst Is Over

Presidential Headquarters, Palace Hotel, San Francisco, Aug. 1.—President Harding awoke shortly after 6 o'clock (10 o'clock, Boston time), having had almost a normal amount of sleep. His rest, which was described as the most nearly natural of any during his illness, began before 11 o'clock last night.

The President was "feeling fine."

The President's temperature after his restful night was 99 degrees, a drop from 100.2 degrees reported in the last medical bulletin at 11 o'clock last night. His pulse this morning was 114, as compared with 116 last night, and his respiration was unchanged at 40.

Word from his suite was that all was quiet and there had been no noticeable change in the rate at which he was progressing toward recovery.

Presidential Headquarters, Palace Hotel, San Francisco, Aug. 1. (A.P.)—President Harding today seemed certain of recovery, barring improbable development of new complications in his illness, or the equally improbable increase of the present ones.

Brig-Gen. Charles E. Sawyer, chief of the staff of physicians on the President's case, was standing by his statement of last night that the crisis had been passed and that "the

LOOM-FIXERS STRIKE AT LANCASTER MILLS

Clinton, Aug. 1.—Loom fixers in the Lancaster Mills went on strike today following, they charge, a violation of a wage agreement. They claim a delayed wage increase was to be retroactive for five weeks, but that the management refused to adhere to it following an unfavorable market. The plant, according to notice posted today, will be closed indefinitely.

MAN'S BODY FOUND BY POLICE IN HARBOR OFF CASTLE ISLAND

The body of a well-dressed man was picked up today off Castle Island by the crew of the police boat, Edwin U. Curtis. The body had apparently been in the water several days. The man was about five feet, eight inches tall, weighed 150 pounds. He wore a norfolk suit, white shirt, brown oxford shoes, black stockings, black belt, white underwear and a Lancet wrist watch. The remains were taken to the Northern mortuary, where they were viewed by Medical Examiner Brickley.

CORCORAN BREAKS DOWN

Pleads in Tears for Release on Bail, but District Attorney O'Brien Refuses to Yield

William J. Corcoran, former district-attorney of Middlesex County, broke down at the State House today and wept openly and bitterly.

The tears came when Corcoran pleaded with his inquisitors, during the conference in the office of the attorney general, for permission to be released on bail so that he could join his wife and four children in Hempstead, L. I., pending his trial.

"The talk about my wife being separated from me is a damnable lie," Corcoran said. "She has never needed me more than she needs me now. Please admit me to bail so that I can be with my family until the trial begins."

O'BRIEN REFUSES TO YIELD.

Despite the tearful plea, District Attorney O'Brien declined to permit Corcoran's release on bail.

Present at the conference were O'Brien, Attorney-General Benton, Assistant Attorney Hurwitz and Police Inspector Mitchell.

Corcoran was brought back to Boston today from New York by stand trial on twenty-seven indictments for larceny, blackmail, extortion and other crimes.

He was in the custody of Inspector John Mitchell of the Boston Police Department and Albert Hurwitz, Assistant Attorney-General of Massachusetts. Another member of the party was Harry E. Lovejoy, lawyer friend of Corcoran and charged with having been associated with him in several of the latter's alleged exploits laid to Corcoran. Lovejoy is at liberty pending decision on appeal for a stay of sentence.

Mrs. Corcoran was not at the Tombs or the Station to see her husband off. At his request a message was sent to her home at Hempstead, L. I., suggesting that she desired to save her from the embarrassment of saying goodbye.

It is understood that Corcoran's confession to Former Attorney-General Allen does not refer to the cases which are the basis of the indictments on which Corcoran will be tried and will not figure in the proceedings.

Assistant Attorney General Hurwitz says it is the plan of the State

CHINESE SHOOT AT AMERICANS

Amoy, China, Aug. 1 (A.P.)—Three Americans, named Padgett, Stuart and Lupton, were fired on while attempting to land here.

Gunboats of the Peking govern ment, which Monday began a drive to Fu-Chu, continued through last night, broke out with occasional firing today, shots striking residences in Kulangsu.

It is reported that a battalion of troops is moving on Changchow, about fifty miles west of here, and will meet a detachment coming south in an effort to capture that city. Japanese gunboats are expected in the harbor.

MURDERERS FLEE AS BULLETS FLY

Arthur J. Bower, thirty-year Methuen patrolman, was shot to death today by occupants of a parked automobile on the Lowell Lawrence State road. It was a big green touring car, believed to have been a Paige. As the patrolman fell spinning to the roadside, a bullet in his body, the big car, with a roar of exhaust valves, fled into the dawn.

Whether he had interrupted "petters" or happened on robbers or rum-runners supplying camps along the Merrimac River is a mystery.

The murder has all the earmarks of the shooting of Patrolman James A. Preston of Wakefield, shot to death in April, 1921, and for whom Clarence Loud was made the central figure in a sensational murder trial, later being freed.

Bower, with Patrolman John McDonald, had gone to the Lawrence Cricket club in response to a call to protect the place from roysterers. McDonald was down the road chasing "petters" in several other parked cars. He heard no shot, but arrived back at where he had left Bower to find him at the roadside emptying his gun after the flying murder car. McDonald says he gave chase, but was outdistanced. Bower died in Lawrence General Hospital. He was semi-conscious from the time he was shot, speaking only to ask for his wife. She reached him as he died.

The President's Condition.
Food a Danger.
1,000,000 Young Men.
God Owns This Land.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright 1923, by Star Company)

THE PRESIDENT'S SERIOUS illness, which, happily, presents at this writing no serious danger, is the one topic that interests the nation. In the universal sympathy and affectionate solicitude, there must be comfort and sustaining power for President Harding and his devoted wife.

SUCH ILLNESS as now prostrates the President threatens every man past fifty who lets devotion to duty drive him beyond his normal powers. A physique, nervously exhausted, offers little resistance to attack, and constant change of diet, with good-natured acceptance of unusual foods, adds to the danger.

THE INDICATIONS of pneumonia are such as often follow a violent attack of indigestion, lowering vitality and facilitating the work of the pneumonia bacillus. Fortunately the President's powerful constitution is exceptional and will, undoubtedly, protect him against the double attack.

MANY EUROPEAN PHYSICIANS would be disturbed by the statement in the doctors' bulletin: "Nourishment is being taken regularly." It is, of course, nourishment of the lightest possible kind, most easily assimilated. But it is not easy for the system simultaneously to eliminate poisons and assimilate food. The President will do with nothing but water, in abundance, for a week, if necessary, while concentrating all organic energy on getting rid of poison.

THE DOCTORS locate the poison effects, at present, in the gall bladder. About that mysterious organ medical science knows little, but the work it does certainly is important in the digestive process, and a complete rest from all digestive effort, for a few days, would be recommended by many doctors.

THIS WRITER can testify to the details of one severe case of gall bladder trouble, in which able doctors insisted on operative feeding, to be followed by an operation, as soon as the patient could stand it. The patient declined food for ten days, when temperature, pulse and respiration having returned to normal, there was no further trouble and no operation, but a permanent cure, thanks to no food.

DOCTORS OFTEN give food, against their own judgment, for fear of alarming relatives, ignorant of the danger of food given at the wrong time, when all internal strength is needed to fight illness.

IT WILL be recalled that some of Europe's most famous physicians protested earnestly against the announcement that Caruso, suffering from internal poisoning, was "eating well." Nature, oldest physician, warns all sick animals, by instinct, against food.

CANADA PROPOSES to bring over one million young men from England, boys about eighteen years of age. They will be taken in at the rate of two or three hundred thousand a year. And Canada, wise land, will supply money to bring them over.

MEANWHILE, THIS highly intelligent country shuts out, in its self-satisfied ignorance, the very pick of Europe's ambitious, energetic population that would gladly come here to build up the nation, and ineffably bring mouths to eat the surplus wheat.

THE FIERY CROSS, Ku Klux Klan newspaper, prints a "Klan creed." It says among other things, "I am a native-born American citizen, and I believe my rights in this country are superior to those of foreigners." That will interest the Red Indians, but what about the right of God Almighty? He made this country, and sent Christopher Columbus, a foreigner, by the way, to discover it. The rights of the Lord, presumably, are paramount. All creatures on earth are His children. Suppose He sends them here in future, as He has in the past, to use the unused land, what then?

IRENE CASTLE GOT DECREE ON JULY 12

IRENE AND HER GOAT

Her denial in New York that she had been divorced from Robert Treman is refuted by an examination of the Paris court records. They show that the decree was granted on July 12, although it was not publicly announced until July 23, two days after she had sailed for New York. Irene brought a goat with her which she displayed with pride.

Mystery Woman in Man's Death

MURDERED, SAYS HIS DAUGHTER

Strange Woman Who Gave Clue to Body in Morgue Disappears

"My father was murdered. He did not meet death by accident. His death was caused by a mysterious woman. Find her and you will clear up his death.

"He was murdered for his money. He always carried a large sum with him. On his body we found but 40 cents."

So declared Miss Harold J. Mellen of No. 118 London street, East Boston, today.

The body of her father, John Mahoney of the South End, lay for five days unidentified in a Hingham undertaking establishment. Mahoney supposedly had been killed by a New Haven train at Windemere station, Hull. A mysterious woman led to the finding of the dead man in the Hingham undertaking emporium.

GAVE FALSE NAME.

"This woman," said Miss McGinn, "called at the home of my mother, Mrs. McGrane, of No. 142 London street, East Boston, on Monday night. 'You'll find Mahoney's body,' she said, 'if you search the morgues.' She seemed to know all about my father.

"When she left she remarked to my mother: 'Well, you people look respectable. She left a name and address—17 Clifton street, Malden. We discovered both were fictitious.

The woman was about forty-five years old, small slight and dark. Police are endeavoring to learn if she was one of a party of four, two men and two women, seen in a heated argument at the Windemere station shortly before Mahoney's body was found. They were seen by a boy in the station.

GAVE CLUE TO BODY

Mahoney's body was found following the strange woman's visit to the Downey Undertaking Parlors, Hingham.

Today police endeavored to find answers to these questions:

How did the strange woman know Mahoney was dead?

Why did Mahoney's body lie five days unidentified?

Why did the woman interest herself in having his body recovered by relatives if she took part in his death?

Mahoney had been living alone in the South End. He was employed at the Massachusetts avenue plant of the Edison Company.

He was 55 years old.

10,000 CAME TO U. S. IN 10 MINUTES

Thousands of Others Nearing Port on Liners From Europe

New York, Aug. 1—Immigration officials on Ellis Island today were in the midst of the heaviest rush of aliens in the history of the station. Almost 10,000 would-be Americans crossed the imaginary line from Gravesend Bay into Quarantine within ten minutes after the stroke of midnight, when the new monthly quota opened.

Immigration officials stated that by noon each train through the station as fast as possible but that it did not seem to matter much from 5,000 to 6,000 an hour. At least eight, and probably more, steamers would be given orders Commissioner Curran said.

Two more ships, with approximately 2,000 aliens aboard, in the bay but held, so late to come up the harbor before daylight. During the day the total of arriving aliens was estimated roughly at 21,000. Many thousands of these will never even see Ellis Island as their status will require other more complicated quotas have been met.

MRS. RYAN FLEES WHEN HUSBAND IS SUMMONED

Portland, Me., Aug. 1—With one thought paramount in a mind which seemed unbalanced by hysteria, Mrs. Allan A. Ryan has fled into the depths of the Maine woods.

She suddenly gave up her small camp at South Casco in the midst of an illness which required the attendance of two physicians. Dr. Hartman of Lewiston and a New York physician, who had been summoned—when she learned that the physicians had requested her husband to come to her bedside. This is the thought which sent her further into the wilderness.

TRIES TO HIDE

Mrs. Ryan had worked herself into a condition of intermittent fever and insomnia as a result of the publication of her alleged relations with George Maxwell, president of the American Society of Authors and Composers, in connection with the poison pen cases. She had become so nervous as a result that even her own children were not allowed to approach her.

She sought the camp in South Casco to hide—to keep away from the publicity that has made a fugitive out of her. Her condition there became so grave that it was decided to summon her eldest son, Allan A. Ryan Jr., and her husband, to her bedside. This is what decided her to keep on moving.

LEAVES SICK BED

Sick as she was, she got into an automobile and started away, without notice.

It is believed that New York papers containing an account of her alleged cable and radio correspondence with Maxwell fell into her hands, and caused her to buck up and go. She is apparently counting upon the constant shifting from place to place to keep her identity a secret from her temporary neighbors.

It is believed a chauffeur and nurses accompanied her from New York since a report that Ryan, informed of his wife's condition, was on his way to Maine, and that he will make every effort to locate his wife and have a talk with her.

Her decision to go into the wilds under such circumstances was an indication as to how keenly she has been suffering.

COURT RECORDS REFUTE IRENE'S STATEMENT

Paris, Aug. 1—Irene Castle's denial in New York she had been divorced from her husband, Robert Treman, Ithaca millionaire was refuted today by examination of the court records here, which showed that her decree was granted July 12.

It was not publicly announced by the Seine Tribunal until July 23, two days after the actress had sailed for New York.

Following is the official Palais of Justice court record in the case:

Judgment rendered July 12.

"Irene Foote Treman, residence 10 Rue De Penthievre, defendant, versus against Robert E. Treman, residence 74 Avenue Champs Elysees (Claridge Hotel) called for judgment July 5 before Judge Louis Robert, president, and Judges L. Cloch and Marot, Clerk Mizard.

"The Tribunal, after hearing Lawyer M. Pachmann, counsel for Irene Foote Treman, assisted by M. Le Grand, bailiff, and M. Vaine, bailiff, for Robert Treman, granted a divorce as demanded by Irene Foote Treman on the complaint of the injurious attitude on the part of her husband."

AUTOS CRASH IN DRIVING LESSON

Mrs. Timothy J. Hegarty of No. 18 Sunbeck avenue, Brighton, suffered a fractured rib and contusions of the back, and her daughter, Loretta, was painfully bruised when a machine in which they were riding collided with a car driven by Miss Rose O'Connell of No. 156 Willard street, Quincy, at Washington and Arnold streets, Quincy. Miss O'Connell was taking a driving lesson when the crash occurred.

LOVE-SICK GIRL OF 14 TURNS ON GAS

Providence, Aug. 1—Miss Irene Hopkins, fourteen, a schoolgirl, of No. 128 Dudley street, disappointed in love, turned on the gas and was taken in the ambulance to the hospital. There she told the police how a stranger man entered the house, knocked her down, tied her up and turned on the gas to asphyxiate her. Later she confessed she did all this herself.

Careless Drivers Fined

Haverhill, Aug. 1—A war is being waged by local police against motorists who drive on the left side of the road without having an unobstructed view for 100 yards and eight violators were fined $10 by Judge Daniel J. Cavan.

HOBBS TRUEST LOVER WRITES MRS. BARNES

By BERT FORD

Haverhill, Aug. 1—There isn't enough money in New Hampshire

Henry H. Hobbs.

Mrs. Ethel C. Barnes, divorcee, to Henry Hobbs, bridegroom in New England's latest case, in a "diary" which he began on May 29, 1922, and brought three days ago.

Hobbs' parents seek his return from New Hampshire State Prison, where he is serving ten to fifteen years. They implore Mrs. Barnes to send on their son. Mrs. Barnes, his former housekeeper, married the school girl on whose complaint Hobbs was sentenced. The "diary letter," in part, is as follows:

LOVES HER HOME.

"At Our Dear Little Home—

"Saturday Night, May 29, 1922.

"My dear Henry—I take my first love very much, but it isn't a real home now, only a rest for a head, because 'papa' isn't here. I can stand it very well in the time, but when night comes it seems that I must watch it all night. I'll have you yet, dear sweetheart, it will take time.

"I tried everything to get the magazine you wanted, but the small dealers here about didn't carry it. I will try in Haverhill when I go there. I am including prayers which Mrs. Washburn gave me, including a cute Bible alphabet. Read in your prayers and be faithful to them and read your Good Book. God will help you, I know. "He has been my only comfort in our terrible sadness and I have talked with you through Him for months, and by you constantly praying too, we can be brought near to each other, though separated.

"The moon is wonderful tonight. I want to stay out, but the mosquitoes do bite so I had to come in. I am going to close now and write more Sunday. I do wish you were here, daddy dear. Good night.

"Sunday.

"My Dear—I was pretty near alone from my walk and am so lone today one would think me lost. It is lovely here today and I have thought only of my dear one.

"Memorial Day.

"Well, dear, another lovely day. I am sad for those who want to be with, but give me my own self.

COW MADE A HIT.

"Do you remember Cherry, the cow I bought of George Mason and sold to Atwood? Atwood was out here to see if we had one more cow to be heard. I was pleased with Cherry and Atwood was pleased with Cherry, and wouldn't take him for today. Said she gave twenty quarts. Pretty good recommendation, wasn't it?

"YOUR OWN."

"Tuesday p. m.

"Went down to the box and as expected found one. There is never one when I have time to go, but the postman was late, so I walked up and back.

RAY OF SUNSHINE.

"You mustn't be impatient with my way of writing. You have left us all this week. I shall attend to that matter as soon as possible. I have been a very lonely people, dear, and that is Our Pocket. I have all the things you mentioned and more too and am overjoyed to be able to give you things I carry pleasure.

"There never lived, to me, a better, more honest sweetheart than you. There isn't money enough New Hampshire for me to part with. It's real dear. It shall never leave my finger until you can get it back.

"Will close, my dear, with all my love. May God watch over my Boy and give him help and courage.

"ETHEL."

2 WIVES STABBED AS HUSBANDS ROW

Greenfield, Aug. 1—Mrs. Annie Bordalaza, 30 years old, wife of Manuel Bordalaza and mother of two children, living on River street, and Mary Olivia, who with her husband Andrew, lives upstairs, were taken to the hospital suffering from severe knife wounds, inflicted when they attempted to stop a fight between their husbands.

Vigil Lamp for President Burns at Nuns' Shrine

Washington, Aug. 1— A vigil lamp, imploring her indefatigable powers for the recovery of President Harding, is burning today at the Shrine of the Blessed Teresa, the Carmelite nun recently beatified by Pope Pius, in the Mount Carmel hallroad retreat house for women at Catholic University here.

The lamp was ignited by the Franciscan Sisters of the Atonement and will burn night and day until the President is officially pronounced out of danger.

MOTHER AND 2 BOYS SUPPORT FAMILY OF 7

The seven members of the Rose family of Wellesley Hills work cheerfully to keep going while Mrs. Mary Rose, mother of six little tots, endeavors her search for the father of the family, Reginald Rose, who disappeared six weeks ago.

Things were in a fairly flourishing state when Rose, a conductor on the Boston & Worcester street railway, left home.

Since the disappearance, Mrs. Rose has assumed a position in a silk factory in Newton Upper Falls and has done all she can long for a small wage, as she is not an experienced worker. Reginald, 17, who was born from 6 to $8 a week cashing on the Newton Country Club links. He works for a farmer and earns about $3 a week. The joint earnings of these three, when added to their share of the rent, enable the seven to live and buy food and clothing for seven.

While mother and the two boys are at work, the youngest boy in the house is Douglas, who is 9. He takes care of Russell, 6; Mary, 4, and Henry, a year and a half old. He feeds them, bathes them, and mothers them generally.

The little family is just about able to exist at the present time. How they will fare when winter comes is another problem.

Possibly the missing Mr. Rose may interest himself in that problem, and communicate with his wife.

BLIND EMPLOYES PROTEST CLOSING

The blind employes of the Camp Dresser industry for the Blind, a workshop institution, will hold a mass meeting tonight at 7:30 at Rhodes Hall, No. 40 Prospect street, Cambridge, to protest against the closing of the plant. The workers charge that the "enormous cost" of maintenance given as the reason for the closing is due to the unwillingness of certain employes.

He was held in $2,000 bail.

While police acted quickly in order to get robbers in the Lowell vicinity with the Hower murder, points from Lowell, Pawtucket and Methuen, as well as State troopers, were alerted when the news developed. Following these orders, the car occupied by Soldo, Gorham and Goldstein was stopped a four hours.

TRAIL MURDER CAR

In Lawrence five suspects were rounded up.

None of those arrested could face McDonald. Two local patrolmen's examinations, and the shooting occurred as he had happened in Nashua, N. H., with Chief of Police Hines of Methuen, who had received on a tip that the murder car had been found there.

At 1:30 this morning, Capt. William J. Oliver, in charge of the night desk at Methuen police headquarters, got a telephone call from Percy Wray at the Cricket Club, saying that no license was needed in New Lawrence. Bower told McDonald to proceed car. He took their names and

WRANGLE OVER LICENSE

Arrived at the clubhouse, the officers found the intruders had disappeared, driving off in the direction of Lawrence. The officers stood in pursuit. On the lonely Lawrence-Lowell road they came upon a parked car.

There were no lights on the car. The officers found three men in the machine, according to McDonald. Bower asked the men what they were doing there. One of them gave an evasive answer. Bower then asked to see the registration and it came of the driver.

The driver replied that it took four days to get a license in New Hampshire. Bower said that he had no registration papers of the car.

McDonald said he noticed another car further down the street toward a turn and a girl spooning in the car. He took their names and told them to proceed on.

The driver of the car and told them to drive on.

SAW BOWER FALL

McDonald then saw another car still further down the road toward Lawrence. He also ordered the driver of this car to go on. The machine was parked near a dance hall. McDonald said he drove into the parking space about the dance hall to see whether any other cars were parked there. Seeing none, he turned the police on, around and returned toward the spot where Bower was.

Just as he started back to where Bower was holding a suppressed conversation, he saw the big car start up. Bower tossed off the running board. McDonald says he heard no shot. He thought that Bower had been pushed off so he passed the body in the road without stopping to make the murder sure.

The big car, believed to be a Paige, quickly distanced McDonald's Ford and disappeared toward Lowell. McDonald returned where Bower lay. Two nearby campers were trying to aid him.

Investigation in the funeral flower made an ineffectual attempt to tell McDonald of the shooting. He kept interrupting his story to call for his wife.

WIFE AT DEATHBED

So when McDonald reached Lawrence General Hospital he sent immediately for Mrs. Bower. She was in the operating room and a few seconds after her husband had died with her name on his lips.

Bower was one man. The bullet pierced the left side of his head.

McDonald thinks he can identify the slayer of Officer A. T. Gilbert only he did not catch the auto license number.

An alarm was sent out and surrounding cities and towns and many state police immediately began a hunt for Paige cars.

McDonald thinks he can identify the slayer of Officer Gilbert, but he did not know of what his identity. The third man was said to have had a small build, he thought. He did not get a good view and does not know whether there were two or three men in the car.

A 45 caliber Colt automatic army type was found near where Bower was shot. Three cartridges were left in the chamber.

The police telegraphed the number to the Colt factory with the request they send back word where this pistol had been sold.

Apparently the gun had been tossed to the road by the slayer after he had emptied it into Officer Bower's body.

The fact six shots had been fired indicated to the police that the murderer shot at the dead officer while the car was standing.

DOZEN SHOTS FIRED

Bower's revolver was found near his body. It was empty and the evidence that the officer had fired a shot at his slayer is the McDonald claimed he heard more than a dozen shots. He says from the scene of the shooting, but he says that he did not hear any shots. Six were fired by the victim and as many by the slayer.

Police started circulating Paige cars in Nashua, N. H., after one of the three men in the car had told Officer Bower he was demanding, "We are from Nashua." This aroused suspicion to Bower when he demanded the registration and license of the drivers, who had not.

The Lawrence police were first notified of the shooting by Charles Carter of Haverhill, who was a companion. Mac Gunn, also of Haverhill, was driving along the road shortly after the murder, when he saw Bower lying in the road.

Carter says he was afraid of a hold-up, not recognizing the uniform, and did not stop. He drove into Lawrence and notified the police. When the police arrived at the scene Bower had already been removed to the hospital.

SEEK TAXI DRIVER

Later Carter drove out to Broadway, Lawrence, and stopped at his car which he recognized. A machine came from the direction of Lowell and stopped beside him and a short man with a heavy overcoat got out. He inquired if a taxi driver could be asked, "Have they taken him to the hospital?"

Carter said he did not know.

"Then he must be dead," said the unknown man.

The man then told Carter he had picked up the road near the place where a policeman came up and told him to move on. He turned and drove back toward Lowell.

Then he decided to return and see the matter with the officer he had passed. He saw the car then racing along, both firing shots. One of the cars was a green Paige. He added that the reason for his retirement he did not get the number was that the automobile was going so fast. He did not catch the number.

Carter says he was afraid of a statement of this mysterious individual that he was nobody in the case when he returned to the scene. They are searching for the unknown man driver.

Loud Murder Case Was Never Solved

Patrolman James Arthur Preston of the Wakefield police was the only death of 9.70 on Saturday, April 9, 1921, while arresting an automobile speeders on Lowell road, the street leading from Lake Quannapowitt to Lynnfield.

Frederick Libby, a nearby dent, heard shots and the screams of an hysterical woman. He returned to the road and found Preston's body at 9.20.

Patrolman Joseph Preston, brother of the victim, was the first on the scene and he discovered a memorandum in his brother's police book. This read

C. W. Loud Joseph Preston

"Clarence W. Loud and Alice Donnett." A license number for Loud's car was in the policeman's book.

The police went to Loud's home in Melrose and there found him nursing cuts in his head. They arrested him.

The "Alice Donnett" address of No. 10 Hudson street, Somerville, proved false but it was learned that Loud had lived there five years before.

Nathan A. Tufts, then district attorney of Middlesex County and Silas Smith, State police officer, discovered that Loud and Mrs. Carl P. Dow daughter of ex-Mayor Charles Adams of Melrose, had held clandestine meetings.

Tufts wanted to hold Mrs. Dow but five reputable Melrose men said that they saw her in her home on the Saturday night while playing poker with her husband.

Loud, a shoe salesman, engaged Judge Malcolm E. Sturtevant of Somerville District Court and he in turn called in John P. Feeney. They engaged Joe Matley, former special officer at Rack Rat, police station, as investigator. They won the case. The murder never has been solved.

Loud was lodged in East Cambridge jail on Sunday, April 10, and there he remained until his sensational trial a year later when Feeney discovered other of the witnesses guilty of perjury.

Charges lead was acquitted. Mrs. Dow was never called to the witness stand. The mystery was never cleared away.

Then came an astounding climax. Mrs. Mary O'Leary Raab of Melrose, blonde and vivacious, charged that she had been assaulted and then clubbed into insensibility by Mrs. Dow's home after she had heard an alleged confession of the murder.

Mrs. Dow and other persons present disputed her story. The affair was dragged into Malden District Court. The judge found Mrs. Dow not guilty.

Officer Sure He Would Know Two Men in Death Car

"I can positively identify two of the men in the car from which Hower was shot because I was at his side when we first approached them and Bower threw his flashlight upon them. It carried them out of the night so vividly I can see them now in my mind.

"I left the car on which I was a getting party in another machine, as was not present when Bower was shot."—Patrolman W. Donnell, police gymnasium, Bower to the Cricket Club.

WIFE BEATER GOES TO JAIL 6 MONTHS

In East Boston Court today Judge Harris passed at the fattened feathers of Mr. Antonetta Gallerino. Her eyes blackened with heavy blow, were almost closed; her nose was bent out of face was covered with bruises.

The Judge Barnes turned his glance on the husband, Joseph Gallerino and he shuddered.

"You are one of the most vicious wife-beaters I have ever had come before me. You are an animal. You are worse than the worst wild beast, for no beast would treat his mate as you have treated your wife."

Patrolman Hendrickey, who had arrested the man, testified that on occasion he had witnessed Gallerino kicking his wife all over the room.

Judge Barnes sentenced the man to six months in the House of Correction.

over the ties some distance after leaving the rails.

Those injured and taken to the hospital were:

DR. DAVID DETRICH of Fall River, injure to left knee.

MRS. DETRICK, his wife, bruises, abrasions and shock.

OLIVER C. LEWIS, Washington, D. C., injuries to head and body.

EDWARD MURPHY, Worcester, both legs cut.

All were taken to the hospital at Whitinsville.

The train was in charge of Conductor George Wales and Engineer Burtis E. Dunn, both of Providence. Engineer Dunn says the train was running along smoothly and the first thing he knew he was being dumped around in the cab as the engine jolted over the ties.

CORCORAN LEAVING THE TOMBS

EX-DISTRICT ATTORNEY STARTING BACK TO BOSTON

Former Middlesex County official just after he left the Tombs Prison in New York to entrain for this city, where he will face trial for alleged extortion and bribe-taking. In the party, left to right, are Albert A. Hurwitz, Assistant Attorney General of Massachusetts; Police Inspector John F. Mitchell of Boston, Boston attorney at liberty under stay of a jail sentence; William J. Corcoran, carry suitcase, and Detective Proctor of the New York police department.

and District Attorney O'Brien to call Corcoran for trial the second week in September.

LEFT ON MIDNIGHT.

The party left New York for Boston on the midnight train. Mr. Hurwitz and Inspector Mitchell spent a very busy day in that city hunting for the requisition papers. The papers finally turned up at the office of the New York assistant district attorney shortly after 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Hurwitz and Inspector Mitchell found Corcoran in one of the waiting rooms of the Tombs in consultation with Levenson. He expressed pleasure over the prospect of a speedy return to this city.

WAIVES HEARING.

Corcoran was asked if he knew his rights relative to returning to Massachusetts and declared that he was well informed. He waived his rights to a hearing.

Corcoran's Aid Saves Fellow Prisoner

New York, Aug. 1.—William Moffell, an escaped convict from a Georgia prison camp, who was one of William J. Corcoran's "walking mates" in the Tombs prison yard, says that the former district attorney of Middlesex county, Massachusetts, as one of the best lawyer he ever met.

Corcoran, he said, had advised him he would use force to return to the Georgia camp if he could show that he was mentally sick. When arraigned before an assistant district attorney he made a dramatic appeal for a hearing, claiming the flogging had driven him insane.

Morrell was represented by a lawyer but refused to let him speak for him after the New York detective who accompanied the Georgia officer had insisted that the question of insanity had nothing to do with the matter of extradition.

"I claim it has a lot to do with it," shouted Morrell. "It means death for me to go back there. My back is a mass of welts and ridges from the whip which the guards used on me. From sunup to sundown I had to work on the roads with pick and shovel and every time I failed to keep up with the husky negroes I was taken out of the line and flogged. My legs are sore from the shackles."

"Mr. Corcoran says I am entitled to a chance and my life and has advised me to fight."

He showed his bruised legs. They were a sight, especially near the ankles where the shackles had worn into the flesh. Corcoran says he saw the man undressed and that he is a pitiful sight. Assistant Attorney General Driscoll assigned the case for a hearing tomorrow despite the urging of the Georgia sheriff. The Tombs doctor says the man is insane.

HARDING MUCH BETTER; CRISIS HAS PASSED

President is well on the road to recovery.

Asked to this was the declaration from an authoritative source that the only reason for concern was because the patient was the President of the United States and not because of any symptoms or likelihood of any.

"Since we have our lesson well under control, I feel safe in saying that we have passed the peak load of trouble," was the way General Sawyer summarized the situation in an informal statement.

BELIEVES CRISIS OVER.

"I don't want to be too emphatic about it, because we always face complications. But I feel that this crisis is over and that the President is well on the road to recovery."

This feeling was shared by the other physicians and by members of the President's party. Mrs. Harding, who has been by the side of her husband throughout the fight and who has been in all struggles he has waged, was understood to be even more optimistic and that President was convinced that the battle has been won. He was quoted by Secretary Work as being jubilant.

"Work, I think we're almost out of the woods."

The President's own feelings were expressed at a time when his condition was not so satisfactory as it became as the evening came on and in turn grew into the night.

He was said to be extremely cheerful when he awakened about nine o'clock last night from what Dr. Sawyer described as the best and most natural sleep he has had since his illness began. He was awake only a short time and then dropped back into a sleep that was described as quite different from and exceedingly more satisfactory than the nervous sleep of Monday night, when all the physicians who accompanied the Georgia party agreed that his condition was serious.

Sleep and rest "to repair breaches," Gen. Sawyer had said was what the President most needed, and so far as could be learned prior to issuance of an official bulletin this need was being met.

TAKES NOURISHMENT.

A steady increase in the amount of nourishment being taken by the President was another cause for optimism. His diet consisted of egg nogs, fruit juices, milk, toast and soft boiled eggs. The nourishment obtained by the President, it was said, was quite safe for one in his condition.

General Sawyer, after his last visit to the President's room and before going to bed, issued a brief statement as to Mr. Harding's condition. This noted a pulse of 116; temperature 100.2 and respiration 44, and added by saying that he was "resting comfortably."

Announcement was made that no more bulletins would be issued until after the morning consultation today at 9 o'clock.

The change for the better in the President's condition was so marked that announcement was made that Secretary Christian would leave him today to go South for the ceremonies arranged by the Knights Templar at the Hollywood Bowl. It was planned, as part of the reception that the President, on his half of the Marion, O., commandery, should present the "Beausant" of the order to the California commanders.

A number of the Marion Knights having arranged to attend the ceremony, Secretary Christian, himself a member of Marion commandery, will officiate in the President's stead.

Coolidge Rejoices at Harding's Recovery

Plymouth Vt., Aug. 1.—Vice-President Coolidge today expressed his pleasure at the recovery of President Harding.

"I am rejoiced that my opinion and confidence that President Harding would have sufficient strength to make a speedy recovery has been justified," he said.

"At no time have I had any doubt of his ultimate recovery."

The Vice-President spent the entire morning posing for Dick Sears, International News Reel camera man.

"This is my first vacation in several years and I have enjoyed myself greatly up to the time of President Harding's illness," he confided.

He leaves here Saturday for Northampton, where he will remain most of the Summer, except for short trips to Washington and a visit to the Swampscott home of Frank W. Stearns.

MORSE STAFF ON ANNUAL OUTING

The annual outing of the Leopold Morse Company was held at Norumbega Park. There was a program of athletic events followed by a band concert and dance.

Kenneth Ahlin won the Ernest Goulston silver loving cup for winning the most points in the athletic events. He won the trophy a year ago. Pat Savage was second, Charles Leverod was third.

One of the features of the day was the 50-yard sprint for men more than fifty years of age. This was won by Max Bernhardt. Mr. Goulston was second and H. Isaacs was third.

'BROKE' WHEN WIFE FLED WITH $80,000

New York, Aug. 1.—George C. Lewis, 60 years old, examined today in Supreme Court after a judgment for $7,975.75 had been taken against him by the Blue Ridge Coal Company, declared that his young wife had stripped their apartment of $80,000 worth of property, leaving him without even a bed sheet, and then had disappeared.

Mystery Woman in Man's Death

Today

The President's Condition. Food a Danger. 1,000,000 Young Men. God Owns This Land.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1923, by Star Company)

THE PRESIDENT'S SERIOUS illness, which, happily, presents at this writing no serious danger, is the one topic that interests the nation. In the universal sympathy and affectionate solicitude, there must be comfort and sustaining power for President Harding and his devoted wife.

SUCH ILLNESS as now prostrates the President threatens every man past fifty who lets devotion to duty drive him beyond his normal powers. A physique, nervously exhausted, offers little resistance to attack, and constant change of diet, with good-natured acceptance of unusual foods, adds to the danger.

THE INDICATIONS of pneumonia are such as often follow a violent attack of indigestion, lowering vitality and facilitating the work of the pneumonic bacillus. Fortunately the President's powerful constitution is exceptional and will, undoubtedly, protect him against the double attack.

MANY EUROPEAN PHYSICIANS would be disturbed by the statement in the doctors' bulletin: "Nourishment is being taken regularly." It is, of course, nourishment of the lightest possible kind, most easily assimilated. But it is not easy for the system simultaneously to eliminate poisons and assimilate food. The President will do without loss of strength, if he can do with nothing but water, in abundance, for a week, if necessary, while concentrating all organic energy on getting rid of poison.

THE DOCTORS locate the poison effects, at present, in the gall bladder. About that mysterious organ medical science knows little, but the work it does certainly is important in the digestive process, and a complete rest from all digestive effort, for a few days, could be recommended by many doctors.

THIS WRITER can testify to the details of one severe case of gall bladder trouble, in which able doctors insisted on regular feeding, to be followed by an operation, as soon as the patient could stand it. The patient declined food for ten days, when temperature, pulse and respiration having returned to normal, there was no further trouble and no operation, but a permanent cure, thanks to no food.

DOCTORS OFTEN give food, against their own judgment, for fear of alarming relatives, ignorant of the danger of food given at the wrong time, when all internal strength is needed to fight illness.

IT WILL be recalled that some of Europe's most famous physicians protested earnestly against the announcement that Caruso, suffering from internal poisoning, was "eating well." Nature, oldest physician, warns all sick animals, by instinct, against food.

CANADA PROPOSES to bring over one million young men from England, boys about eighteen years of age. They will be taken in at the rate of two or three hundred thousand a year. And Canada, wise land, will supply money to bring them over.

MEANWHILE, THIS highly intelligent country, shuts out, in its self-satisfied ignorance, the very pick of Europe's ambitious, energetic population that would gladly come here to build up the nation, and eventually bring mouths to eat the surplus wheat.

THE FIERY CROSS, Ku Klux Klan newspaper, prints a "Klan creed." It says among other things, "I am a native-born American citizen, and I believe my rights in this country are superior to those of foreigners." That will interest the Red Indians, but what about the right of God Almighty? He made this country, and sent Christopher Columbus, a foreigner, by the way, to discover it. The rights of the Lord, presumably, are paramount. All creatures on earth are His children. Suppose He sends them here in future, as He has in the past, to use the unused land, what then?

IRENE AND HER GOAT

Her denial in New York that she had been divorced from Robert Treman is refuted by an examination of the Paris court records. They show that the decree was granted on July 12, although it was not publicly announced until July 23, two days after she had sailed for New York. Irene brought a goat with her which she displayed with pride.

Paris, Aug. 1.—Irene Castle's denial in New York she had been divorced from her husband, Robert Treman, Ithaca millionaire was refuted today by examination of the court records here, which showed that her decree was granted July 12.

It was not publicly announced by the Seine Tribunal until July 23, two days after the actress had sailed for New York.

Following is the official Palais de Justice court record in the case:

Judgment rendered July 12.

"Irene Foote Treman, res Seine 10 Rue De Presbourg, Neuilly, defendress defaut against Robert E. Treman, residence 74 Avenue Champs Elysees (Claridge Hotel) called for appearance July 2, before Judge Louis Robert, president, and Judges Le Cloch and Marot, Clerk Mard.

"The Tribunal, after hearing Lawyer M. Parchmann, counsel for Irene Foote Treman, assisted by M. Le Grand, bailiff, and M. Vidal, bailiff, for Robert Treman, granted a divorce as demanded by Irene Foote Treman on the complaint of the intiuous attitude on the part of her husband."

MRS. RYAN FLEES WHEN HUSBAND IS SUMMONED

Portland, Me., Aug. 1.—With one thought paramount in a mind which seemed unbalanced by hysteria, Mrs. Allan A. Ryan has fled into the depths of the Maine woods.

She suddenly gave up her small camp at South Casco, in the midst of an illness which required the attendance of two physicians, the chairman of Lewiston and a New York physician, who had been summoned—when she learned that the physicians had requested her husband to come to her bedside. This is the thought which sent her further into the wilderness.

TRIES TO HIDE.

Mrs. Ryan had worked herself into a condition of intermittent fever and insomnia as a result of the publication of her alleged relations with George Maxwell, president of the American Society of Authors and Composers in connection with the poison pen cases. She had become so nervous as a result that even her own children were not allowed to approach her.

She sought the camp in South Casco to hide—to keep away from the publicity that has made a fugitive out of her. Her condition there became so grave that it was decided to summon her eldest son, Allan A. Ryan Jr., and her husband, to her bedside. This is what decided her to keep on moving.

LEAVES SICK BED

Sick as she was, she got into an automobile and started away, without notice.

It is believed that New York papers containing an account of her alleged cable and radio correspondence with Maxwell fell into her hands, and caused her to pack up and go. She is apparently counting upon the constant shifting from place to place to keep her identity a secret from her temporary neighbors.

It is believed a chauffeur and nurses accompanied her. From New York came a report that Ryan informed of his wife's condition, was on his way to Maine, and that he will make every effort to locate his wife and have a talk with her.

Her decision to go into the wilds under such circumstances was an indication as to how keenly she has been suffering.

COURT RECORDS REFUTE IRENE'S STATEMENT

AUTOS CRASH IN DRIVING LESSON

Mrs. Timothy J. Hogarty of No. 18 Sudbrook avenue, Brighton, suffered a fractured rib and contusions of the back, and her daughter, Loretta, was painfully bruised when a joy ride in which they were riding collided with a car driven by Miss Helen O'Connell of No. 152 Willard street, Quincy, at Washington and Arnold streets, Quincy. Miss O'Connell was taking a driving lesson when the crash occurred.

LOVE-SICK GIRL OF 14 TURNS ON GAS

Providence, Aug. 1.—Miss Irene Hopkins, fourteen, a schoolgirl, of No. 138 Dudley street, disappointed in love, turned on the gas and was taken in the ambulance to the hospital. There she told the police how a stranger man entered the house, knocked her down, tied her up and turned on the gas to asphyxiate her. Later she confessed she did all this herself.

Careless Drivers Fined

Haverhill, Aug. 1.—A war is being waged by local police against motorists who drive on the left side of the road without having an unobstructed view for 100 yards and eight violators were fined $10 by Judge Daniel J. Cavan.

MURDERED, SAYS HIS DAUGHTER

Strange Woman Who Gave Clue to Body in Morgue Disappears

"My father was murdered. He did not meet death by accident. His death was caused by a mystery woman. Find her and you will clear up his death.

"He was murdered for his money. He always carried a large sum with him. On his body we found but 40 cents."

So declared Mrs. Harold J. McGinn of No. 193 London street, East Boston, today.

The body of her father, John Mahoney of the South End, lay for five days unidentified in a Hingham undertaking establishment. Mahoney supposedly had been killed by a New Haven train at Windemere station, Hull. A mystery woman led to the finding of the dead man in the Hingham undertaking morgue.

GAVE FALSE NAME.

"This woman," said Mrs. McGinn, recalled at the home of my mother, Mrs. McIrane, of No. 142 London street, East Boston, on Monday night. 'You'll find Mahoney's body,' she said, 'if you search the morgues.' She seemed to know all about my father.

"When she left she remarked to my mother: 'Well, you people look respectable. She left a name and address: 17 Clifton street, Malden. We discovered both were fictitious.'

The woman was about forty-five years old, small, slight and dark. Police are endeavoring to learn if she was one of a party of four who met and two women left in a sedan. There was a woman at the Windemere station shortly before Mahoney's body was found. They were seen by a boy in the station.

GAVE CLUE TO BODY

Mahoney's body was found following the strange woman's tip at the Downey Undertaking Parlors, Hingham.

Today police endeavored to find answers to these questions:

How did the strange woman know Mahoney was dead?

Why did Mahoney's body lie five days unidentified?

Why did the woman interest herself in having his body recovered by relatives if she took part in his death?

Mahoney had been living alone in the South End. He was employed at the Massachusetts avenue plant of the Edison Company.

He was 55 years old.

DRIVER FAINTS AT WHEEL; CAR RUINED

While driving along Forest street, West Medford, Nicola Pizzuto of No. 191 Elm street, Lawrence, was seized with a fainting spell from his brother-in-law, Castro Rugiero of No. 237 Oak street, Lawrence, could wrest the wheel from his grasp, the sedan crashed into a tree.

Rugiero was rushed to the Peppelini Park Police station and treated for cuts and bruises. Pizzuto, revived by the quick action with a shaking up. The auto was demolished.

AUTO HITS CYCLE AND SPEEDS AWAY

While Henry Frongone, aged years old, of No. 24 Orient avenue, and Augustus Campatelli, seventeen years old, of No. 45 Fairweather street, East Boston, were riding along Bread street an automobile struck the motorcycle, throwing them from the machine, and sped away.

Frongone received cuts about the right cheek, and Campatelli sustained scalp wounds.

10,000 CAME TO U. S. IN 10 MINUTES

Thousands of Others Nearing Port on Liners From Europe

New York, Aug. 1.—Immigration officials on Ellis Island today were in the midst of the heaviest rush of aliens in the history of the station. Almost 10,000 would-be Americans crossed the imaginary line from Gravesend Bay into Quarantine within ten minutes after the stroke of midnight, when the new monthly quota opened.

Commissioner Curran stated that he would rush them through the island as fast as possible, but that he did not expect to handle more than 5,000 a day. At that rate, and probably more quotas would be filled before Commissioner Curran said.

Two more ships, with approximately 2,000 aliens arrived in the bay last night, but late to come up the harbor before daylight. During the day the total of arriving aliens was increased to reach 21,000. Many more are now on the Atlantic. Thousands of these will never even see Ellis Island, as their ships will arrive after their monthly quotas have been filled.

BLIND EMPLOYES PROTEST CLOSING

The blind employes of the Camp Dresser Industry for the Blind, a new institution, will hold a mass meeting tomorrow night at 7:30 at Pioneer Hall No. 41 Prospect street, Cambridge, to protest against the closing of the plant. The workers charge that the "enormous cost" of maintenance given as the reason for the closure is due to the unwillingness of certain employes.

HOBBS TRUEST LOVER WRITES MRS. BARNES

By BERT FORD

Haverhill, Aug. 1.—"Times isn't enough money in New Hampshire for me to live with you little ring, dear. I would if I could have my liberty until you could get it for me. There's a way out. Lived, to me, is better. Leave it to me. Sweetheart that I love."

Henry H. Hobbs, 29th.

Mrs. Ethel C. Barnes, divorcee, to Henry Hobbs, victim in New England's latest case, in a "dairy letter" written on May 29, 1923, and found among three days.

Hobbs parents took his position from New Hampshire State Prison where he is serving ten to fifteen years. They insist that he is innocent and so do Miss Barnes, his former housekeeper, mother of the school girl on whose complaint Hobbs was sentenced. The "dairy letter," in part, is as follows:

LOVES HER HOME.

"At Our Dear Little Home.

"Saturday Night, May 29, 1923.

"My dear Henry—I love my little home very much, but it isn't a real 'Home' now, only a resting place, because 'Papa' isn't here. I can stand it very well in the day time, but when night comes it looks so lonely that I must watch for the boy. I'll have you yet, dear one, but it will take time.

"I tried everything to get the magazine you wanted, but the small dealers hereabout didn't carry it. I will try in Haverhill when I go down there. I am including a list which Mrs. Washburn gave me, including a cute Bible alphabet. Keep up your prayers and be faithful to them and read your Good Book. God will help you. I know. "He has been my only comfort in our terrible sadness and I have talked with you through Him for months, and by you constantly praying too, we can be brought near to each other, though separated.

"The moon is wonderful tonight. I want to stay out, but the mosquitoes do bite so I had to come in. I am going to retire now and write more Sunday. I do wish you were here, daddy dear. Good night.

"Sunday.

"My Dear:—I was pretty near all in from my walk and am so lone to day one would think me 100. It is lovely here today and I have thought only of my dear one.

"Memorial Day.

"Well, dear, another lovely day. I am glad for the [illegible] want to be on the road that give me my own independence.

LOW MADE A HIT.

You remember 'Cheery,' the one we bought of George Mason and sold to Atwood? Atwood sold [illegible] to see if we had any more [illegible] he heard I was selling [illegible] Mason's store. Mason's store [illegible] and wouldn't take $150 for [illegible] Said she gave twenty dollars for it. Pretty good recommendation, won't it?

"YOUR OWN."

"Tonight I'm [illegible] down to the box and no letter [illegible] but sat down and wrote. There is Sawyer came [illegible] and the mailman was late. I waited and waited to meet him.

RAY OF SUNSHINE.

"You mustn't be impatient with the delay of freedom. You have [illegible] all this world. I shall attend to that matter as soon as possible. I have had one [illegible] deal, and that by Our Pocket. I have all the things you mentioned and more too and am overjoyed to be able to give you things that carry pleasure.

"There never lived, to me, a better, truer, more honest sweetheart than you. There isn't money enough in New Hampshire for me to part with you, dear little ring, dear. It shall never leave my finger until you can put it back.

"Will close, my dear, with all my love. May God watch over my Boy and give him help and courage.

"ETHEL."

2 WIVES STABBED AS HUSBANDS ROW

Grantsville, Aug. 1.—Mrs. Annie Donaldson, 26 years old, wife of Mitchell Donaldson and mother of four children, living on River street, and Mary Olson, who with her husband Andrew, lives upstairs, were taken to the hospital suffering from severe knife wounds, inflicted when they attempted to stop a fight between their husbands.

Vigil Lamp for President Burns at Nuns' Shrine

Washington, Aug. 1.—A vigil lamp, imploring her intercessory powers for the recovery of President Harding, is burning today at the Shrine of the Blessed Teresa, the Carmelite nun recently beatified by Pope Pius, in the Mount Carmel national retreat house for women at Catholic University here.

The lamp was lighted by the Franciscan Sisters of the Atonement and will burn night and day until the President is officially pronounced out of danger.

MOTHER AND 2 BOYS SUPPORT FAMILY OF 7

The seven members of the Rose family of Wellesley Hills work willingly to keep going while Mrs. Mary Rose, mother of six little Roses, continues her search for the father of the seventh, Reginald Rose who disappeared six weeks ago.

Things were in a fairly flourishing state when Rose, a conductor on the Boston & Worcester street railway, left home.

Since his disappearance, Mrs. Rose has obtained a position in a silk factory at Newton Upper Falls and the boys, all day long for a small money, as none is not an experienced [illegible] Jr., who is 10 years old, runs from 10 to $8 a week carrying on the Newton Country Club [illegible] 10, works for a farmer and earns about $5 a week. The four members of these three, while [illegible] to be less than $25 a week [illegible] to pay rent and buy food and clothing for seven.

While mother and the two boys are at work the nominal head of the house is Douglas, who is 9. He takes care of Russell, 8; Mary, 5, and Henry, 4. Douglas cooks all the meals, bathes them, and, like mothers them generally.

The little family is just about able to exist at the present time. How they will fare when winter comes is another story.

Possibly the missing Mr. Rose may interest himself in that problem, and communicate with his wife.

PARIS DECREES SHORT SKIRTS AND SILHOUETTE STYLES

TRIUMPH FOR SLIM WOMEN

Fur Trimmings and Velvet Hats and Dresses Will Also Be Popular

By C. F. BERTELLI
Universal Service Wireless.

Paris, Aug. 1.—Skirts reaching just below the knees will be a feature of the new fashions which will be exhibited to American buyers for the first time on August 7.

Dressmaker Chanel, who is regarded as leader of the fashion makers, insists that the American effort to reestablish the long skirt is doomed. He declares that smart women must exhibit their lower limbs or resign all claims to being fashionable.

JENNY FOLLOWS IDEA.

Jenny, also a leader in style creation, follows the idea that there must be freedom for the lower limbs.

Endeavors to popularize the short figure, which was a feature of last season, have totally failed. The years silhouette styles being again a triumph for the slim women.

FUR IN DEMAND.

Numerous new furs have been introduced. In fact, fur will be in great demand for trimming, which is an entirely new departure from last February. Velvet is also popular, both for dresses and hats.

The above are the main features of the new fashions and have been exclusively obtained a full week before the first opening of any importance.

BRITAIN 'GOING IT ALONE' FOR BERLIN PACT

London, Aug. 1. (I.N.S.)—Following a meeting of the Cabinet, it was learned from semi-official sources today that Great Britain has practically decided to attempt an separate negotiations agreement with Germany.

Premier Baldwin is hopeful that a separate Anglo-German agreement will not break down the Anglo-French efforts.

Although the Premier believes further negotiations with France are useless, Cabinet members will confer almost continuously for the next 24 hours, framing a statement which may induce France to renew diplomatic conversations in a more conciliatory mood. The Premier will make his statement in the House of Commons tomorrow.

Trillion Marks Printed Daily in Germany

BERLIN, Aug. 1 (AP)—The German money presses ground out a trillion marks per day the latter part of July and threw in an extra 235,000,000,000 for good measure.

The Reichsbank's home gold reserve, according to official statistics, reported sold abroad. The bank now has slightly more than 900 millions in bullion in its Berlin vaults and 150 millions on deposit abroad. Its holdings in treasury notes and discounted bills total more than 5,000,000,000,000,000 paper marks.

VETERAN BANKER FATALLY STRICKEN

Charles A. Vialle, for many years a director of the National Shawmut Bank, died suddenly in the Phillips House from an attack of acute indigestion. He was stricken while at his desk in the bank. When that bank was merged with the National Shawmut in 1908, he had completed forty-eight years with the Bank of the Republic of which he was president. Since 1879 he had lived at Hotel Brunswick.

A NEW IDEA

In Selling Used Pianos

By CHICKERING & SONS

Public Protection and Guarantee ON USED PIANOS

it is no longer necessary to buy an unguaranteed and unconditioned used piano—neither is it necessary to pay other than an economical price for any used piano regardless of its name. Chickering & Sons has established at 800 Washington St. (opposite Hollis St.) salesrooms for the continuous sale of used pianos and player-pianos taken from the finest homes in New England in exchange for new Chickering pianos and the famous Ampico.

In this store used pianos are not sold until they are reconditioned at the Chickering factory and put into the best possible playing condition. These used pianos are guaranteed as to value and condition by Chickering & Sons. This guarantee gives the purchaser full protection. These used pianos have an exchange value to the full amount paid toward the purchase of a new piano or player-piano within one year.

"CHARMING GIRL" TOURNEY CLOSES AUG. 8—ONE WEEK LEFT

NO ENTRIES RECEIVED AFTER THAT

Another Flock of Beauties Enter Lists for Honor of Winning Fame and Title

There's just one week left in which to enter the Boston American's CHARMING GIRL tournament.

The tournament will close August 8. No entries received after 12 o'clock noon on that date will be accepted. If you've been holding off girls, get busy, as the closing hour will positively not be extended.

If you believe you are the MOST CHARMING girl in Greater Boston or have a friend or relative who is, ENTER NOW.

That free trip to Atlantic City with all expenses paid for one week, will be won by SOMEBODY. We don't care who the winner is. Leading artists who are to act as judges will make the selection and we will do the rest.

Every mail is bringing many new entries to the American office. Among the most recent are: Miss Mae L. Laurie, No. 131 Orange street, Chelsea; Miss Florence Cumming, No. 29 Clifton street, Roxbury; Miss Evelyn Goodsell, No. 216 Central avenue, Wollaston.

Other entrants include Miss Marie P. Martin, No. 20 Haviland street, Back Bay; Miss Sadie Levantasky, No. 481 Seaver street, Dorchester; Mrs. Helen Smith, No. 416 Warren street, Roxbury; Miss Leonore Zinnerman, No. 88 Willow street, Cambridge; Miss Bessie Brown, No. 27 Aetna street, Worcester.

Additional entries are: Miss Marion Allen, No. 257 Beach street, Revere; Mrs. Dorothy Hawkins, No. 130 Commonwealth avenue, Allston; Miss Blanche A. Reardon, West High street, Avon; Miss Evelyn Foster, No. 129 Beach street, Wollaston.

Others entered are Miss Chona Paula, No. 59 Mendum street, Roslindale; Miss Ruth V. Larson, No. 3 Kingsdale street, Dorchester; Miss Margaret Conboy, No. 85 Holmes avenue, Dorchester, and Miss Ida Rosen, No. 58 Theodora street, Dorchester.

Many of these girls were nominated by their sweethearts or relatives who believe they are sufficiently charming to win the wonderful week's free outing at America's great seaside resort.

What a trip it's going to be! Every penny expense of the winner and her mother or other chaperon of her own choice will be paid. The girl only leave her pocketbook at home. This event will be during August week, beginning September 2.

Miss Boston's as the winner of the American's tournament will be called, to compete against 60 of the MOST CHARMING girls from other cities for the national beauty title. She will also take part in the Birthday Beauties parade if she desires. The winner of these contests is to receive a $5,000 gold trophy.

PAID TO MURDER RICH FUR DEALER

New York, Aug. 1.—"Murder for Hire" charges that brought about a Grand Jury investigation resulted in the indictment of three men on charges of felonious assault.

Pietor Gini, one of the men indicted, who has been held by the police for two months, has confessed according to the district attorney's office, to having been offered $100 to slay Hermin Gabbe, wealthy fur garment manufacturer, with plants in New York and South Norwalk, Ct.

Gabbe was attacked and stabbed by Gini here last May. The wound inflicted by the would-be assassin, however, was not fatal.

HINT EX-KAISER AND SON PLOT 'COMEBACK'

London, Aug. 1 (U.N.S.)—Advices from Doorn to the Daily Mail today continued to hint that German monarchist plotting is under way.

The former Crown Prince is still among his father, ex-Kaiser Wilhelm, at Doorn.

According to the Daily Mail many mysterious visitors have called at Doorn, including politicians, bankers, professors and some nobles, among them Prince Fuerstenberg.

Amsterdam, Aug. 1 (U.N.S.)—Dutch newspapers indignantly deny German monarchist activities in progress at Doorn. It is pointed out that both Doorn and Wieringen, where the ex-Crown Prince makes his home, are under surveillance by the Dutch government and that no such activities would be allowed.

Manchester, Eng., Aug. 1 (U.N.S.)—The former German Crown Prince is said to start life afresh either at home in Germany or in the United States, said a despach to the Guardian today. Although a monarchist at heart, he confided to friends at Wieringen that he wants to go back to Germany as a private citizen.

On the other hand, added the despatch, the former Kaiser is still Kaiser in his own mind, lives in a world of romance just as he used to do and has not yet given up hope of returning to Germany.

JEAN, THE BOOK AGENT, ONLY 16; AND MARRIED

Pow!—goes the bubble of romance. For Miss Jean Sothern, who wore a wedding ring to protect her from the advances of possible subscribers to the many magazines she represents, is actually married.

And her husband is Roy Graves, a soda-jerking young person of New York, who won Jean when she was only fifteen years of age—and that was only a year ago.

And her father has been looking for her for weeks, ever since she skipped from New York with a Miss Rita Whitney of Gardener, Mass.

And another person looking for her is William E. Frye of the National Sales Company of New York, who came on to Boston today to try and locate Miss Sothern.

We read that story in the American about Jean's way of doing business by stepping into automobiles parked along the street," said Mr. Frye. "We don't let our girls do business that way.

"As a matter of fact this girl is not authorized to represent us although she carries our books.

"The girl has more nerve than anybody I have ever met; can sell more subscriptions than anybody else on our staff—but she's dynamite. I'd like very much to meet up with her and tell her a few things."

It's a cinch. All Mr. Frye has to do is to park his auto.

New York—Dr. Julius Weinstein, a stomach specialist living on West End avenue, who gave up practice a year ago after a nervous breakdown had sent him to a sanitarium at Kingston, N. Y., today was reported missing since July 4.

6,300 TROLLEYMEN STRIKE IN JERSEY FOR MORE PAY

Newark, N. J., Aug. 1—One hundred of most of their employes had been dred and forty seven municipalities in Hudson, Essex, Bergen, Camden, Middlesex, Passaic and Union counties today were without trolley service following the walk-out of 6,300 platform and shop men of the Public Service Railway Company at midnight last night.

The men struck to enforce demands for a 20 per cent increase in wages, a six-day week and better working conditions.

Jitney busses hired by the various towns affected, others from Bridgeport, Conn., and some borrowed from Grover Whalen, New York commissioner of plants and structures were used to replace the trolley cars. Officials of industrial plants indicate

John O'Toole, vice-president of the railway company, said no attempt would be made to operate cars today.

EXCURSION RUM SHIPS INVADING CANADA

Detroit, Aug. 1.—The Federal government is expected to take up with Canadian officials the charges made by Earl J. Davis, United States District Attorney for Eastern Michigan, that passenger steamers of Canadian registry are taking aboard crowds of Detroiters, steaming into Canadian waters and there selling liquor to thirsty excursionists.

New 'Paperweight' Bout for the '400'

SOCIETY BOYS IN RING

Sons of Author and Banker Out for Gory Glory in Stock bridge

Stockbridge, Aug. 1.—Betting among wealthy society folk here is heavy and at even odds on the second paperweight championship boxing bout soon to be staged here, in which Robert Underwood Johnson, 2d, thirteen years old, is the title holder, and William H. Ryan, eleven years old, is the challenger.

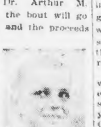
The paperweight champion of the Berkshires is the son of Owen Johnson, well-known author, and the grandson and namesake of Robert Underwood Johnson, poet, author and former ambassador to Italy.

Johnson, Jr.

The challenger is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Barry Ryan and the grandson of Thomas Fortune Ryan, the financier.

ARENA ERECTED.

According to Dr. Arthur M. Walker, promoter, the bout will go for fifteen rounds and the proceeds will go to the gladiators, win, lose or draw. Edward Augustus Crowninshield will be referee and timekeeper.



William H. Ryan

The Inglewood arena, erected by the two boys on the Stockbridge estate of Owen Johnson, has been fitted out with grandstand and balcony seats at ten and twenty cents.

Both pugilists are undergoing vigorous training at the camp established on the Johnson estate.

A week ago, before a large gathering of society men and women, the two boys went for ten rounds in a scheduled fifteen-round bout. The decision went to Johnson when Referee Crowninshield stopped the bout.

BETTING HEAVY.

Betting on the bout was heavy, and it is understood the former diplomat lost heavily when his grandson failed to come through.

After playing for the materials used in building the ring, and tipping the butlers, chauffeurs, valets and other servants who helped the boys build the ring, the boys split the proceeds of the first bout, and each pocketed $3.50.

"We put on that bout because neither of us ever gets any too much spending money," young Johnson told the Boston American. "We're both good friends, and we weren't really angry at each other when we went into the ring. We did it for the same reason anybody fights in the prize ring, we wanted the money."

Advance sales on the coming bout are big, according to the latest reports, although the exact time for the final championship bout has not been determined.

Meanwhile, Stockbridge society anxiously awaits the event, while the male members of the select social circles haunt the training camps to study the condition of the young gladiators.

Held for Yacht Thefts

HOWARD E. SMITH

Howard E. Smith, twenty-year-old North Shore, "love buccaneer," captured by Chief George R. Dean of Manchester who answered the youth's distress signals when a heavy sea threatened to overturn his canoe, submitted to arrest only because the high waves prevented him from "drawing a bead" on his captor.

This is the belief of Chief Dean, who found a fully loaded 30-30 rifle in the canoe. Smith was held for the grand jury in default of $3,000 bail when he admitted in court to having stolen $1,500 worth of articles from the yachts of wealthy North Shore residents.

Among the effects of the prisoner were found letters from many Greater Boston girls. One of them was signed by Miss Nellie Brazell, 17 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brazell, No 91 Sagamore street, Lynn.

KNOWN TO FATHER.

Miss Brazell is employed in a Boston candy factory. Her father talked to a Boston American representative.

"Yes, we know Smith," he said. "I was greatly surprised to learn of his arrest. We had always thought highly of him. I hope his present difficulties will not be construed by anyone to reflect on my daughter.

"Smith was once in the Navy. He met my son, William, also in the service, and the two boys became quite chummy. Bill brought Smith home with him several times, and it was through Bill that Smith and my daughter met.

LIKABLE CHAP.

"Last Friday, Smith took her to the movies. We all thought it was quite nice of him, and I am sure Nellie liked him. His father is an engineer in a Salem factory, he told us. I have never met his father.

"Young Smith always seemed to me to be a rather likeable chap. I was dumfounded when I first learned of his arrest. It is rather hard to believe a man who has been a guest in my own home has turned out to be a cheap imitation pirate."

RESCUED WITH BABE IN RIVER

Young Wife Plunges From Raft to Escape Man Who Annoyed Her

Mrs. Bertha Janowitz, twenty-one years old, No. 6262 River street, West Lynn, plunged into the Saugus River from the float of the West Lynn Boat Club, with her three-year-old son, Frank, Jr. clasped in her arms, to escape the attentions of an unwelcome suitor.

Police and citizens, who arrived soon after Mrs. Janowitz leaped into the river, rescued her and the boy. They were taken to Lynn Hospital, where it is expected they will recover.

CONSTANTLY ANNOYED.

According to the story Mrs. Janowitz told the police when she regained consciousness, her husband, Harry Janowitz, is employed at McKeesport, Pa. Soon after her husband returned to McKeesport after a recent visit in West Lynn, an unknown man, whom she declared as "a tall, light-complexioned man with dark blue eyes," had constantly annoyed her.

This is the tellef of Chief Dean, who found a fully loaded 30-30 rifle in the canoe. Smith was held for the grand jury in default of $3,000 bail when he admitted in court to having stolen $1,500 worth of articles from the yachts of wealthy North Shore residents.

Tony Marcheski, No. 19 Bates street, Lynn, returning home from Lynn police headquarters where he had just been released on bail, was the first to arrive at the boat club when the alarm was given. He plunged into the river and rescued the drowning woman.

Patrolmen Williams and Smith administered first aid to Mrs. Janowitz. While they were working over her, other persons rescued the boy, took him to his home and put him to bed.

5,000 NEWSBOY TICKETS TO BRAVES FIELD SHOW

Tomorrow night Braves Field belongs to the Boston American newsboys.

"Happy" Rubinowitz, patron saint of the lads who sell Boston's only three-cent newspaper, made a deal with Marcus Loew, who puts on the big show at Braves field every night. "Happy" gets 5,000 tickets for tomorrow night, which assures all Boston American newsies of a chance to come along, and bring their sister. If they haven't got sisters—well, newsies know how to take care of those things.

As to the show: There will be the well-known bathing beauties, including home talent; dancing on the biggest floor in the world, to the music of Alex Hyde's fifty syncopaters; vaudeville stuff and some of the best motion pictures you ever saw.

If you sell Boston Americans, Happy'll deadhead you through for tomorrow night. If he won't it's because you asked him too late. So get busy, kids.

STARVED, THEN LEFT IN DEEP SWAMP

PETER AND RESCUER

CHILD LEFT TO DIE, WALPOLE POLICE SAY

By GRACE DESCHAMPS

"Peter" has come into his own.

They call him Peter at the Norwood Hospital. It's the only name he has to being a regular name, he didn't even have a name when they brought him there yesterday morning.

He is six months old and doctors said he'd never had a square meal. Nobody had ever fondled him in his whole life, they said. He was tired and cold from hours of exposure in a damp swamp without clothing, but he was so astonished to close his eyes when someone actually rocked him to sleep.

CLAD ONLY IN SHIRT

"Peter," apparently, was a baby whom his folks threw away. They left him for six months and more, to an isolated stretch of woods in Walpole and in a swamp, a mass of bushes beneath a tree. There "planted" the unlucky "Peter." They didn't leave him a morsel of food and only a meager shirt on his back to protect his tender body from the cold and insects.

That was Sunday morning. By Sunday noon "Peter" was on broadcasting. His batteries were low, but John Ginley, of Kendall street, Walpole, who was searching for blueberries forty miles from nowhere, managed to pass both of John hurried home to his mother who notified the police.

WAS MURDER ATTEMPT.

"Out of town persons here in a car early Sunday morning, abandoned the baby," declared Sergeant Levy Mattocks of the Walpole police.

"This isn't just an ordinary abandonment, it's something like attempted murder. Under ordinary circumstances, no one ever would have heard the baby's cries in that section of the woods. It was nearly 400 feet from the narrow road that traverses the wood."

Meanwhile, the entire State is being combed for the child's parents.

FIND SUICIDE NOTE IN OLD MAN'S HAT

New York, Aug. 1—An umbrella, coat and straw hat with a note pinned to the band were found by deckhands when the ferryboat Elmira, from Hoboken, reached the New York shore on one of her trips today. "Seventy-four years of age and failing health only make one a burden," read the note.

JULY AUTO TOLL 231 IN NEW YORK STATE

New York, Aug. 1—The National Highway Protective Society reported today that 231 persons were killed in this State during July in automobile accidents. Nineteen of the deaths occurred at railroad crossings. Fatalities during the same month last year totaled 209.

"GLANDS TO CLEAN OUT ASYLUMS"

Therapy as in "Black Oxen" Can Cure Insane, Says Doctor Galvin

Gland therapy, for the treatment of the ills of the human body, will be in general use in the near future, supplanting the drugs and other remedies used at present, according to Dr. George W. Galvin of No. 180 Huntington avenue, founder of the Emergency Hospital and pioneer in gland treatment in this section.

And gland treatment would, according to Dr. Galvin, empty the insane hospitals of the State by sixty-five per cent. of their present "population." If the authorities would adopt this method.

"I will take fifty per cent. of the inmates of the Home for Feeble Minded in Waverley out of that place, if the officials there will let me treat the children," was the physician's startling statement.

Dr. Geo W. Galvin

Like Mary Ogden, the heroine of Black Oxen, the serial story now being published in the Boston American, women of Boston can "cheat" Father Time by the use of the science of gland therapy.

"You are as your glands are," said Dr. Galvin to his interviewer. "If your glands function properly you will enjoy health.

CAN BE TAKEN IN PILLS.

"Forty years ago I began to study gland therapy. But the medical skeptics who are still too numerous, seem to have anything new thrust upon them.

Gland treatment, the doctor explained, can be applied by pills, which are made from the glands of animals selected in accordance with the glands of the human body.

Rejuvenation or vitality in men and women, young and old, according to the doctor one of the accomplishments of gland therapy. Dr. Serge Voronoff, of Vienna, French physiologist, who said that gland therapy stops a man or woman from growing old, appeared especially to regard to personal appearance.

CAN PROVE CLAIMS

According to Dr. Galvin the somber shadow which clouds the mental and physical tortures in the female body, that accompanies its period of life, can be eliminated.

"The rejuvenation of Mary Ogden, in Black Oxen, is only what any woman may undergo by proper gland treatment" declared Dr. Galvin.

"I have said that I would cure 50 per cent of the inmates of the Feeble Minded Home of their malady. I am ready at any time to back up that statement if the officials of that school will give me permission to go ahead.

BARRED BY ASYLUM.

"I have sought permission before but have been unable to get it. You can quote me as saying that the officials of the Feeble Minded School are more concerned in getting work out of their patients than of having them taken out and cured.

"There are countless people in our insane asylums today who could be returned to their normal state by gland therapy. The use of gland extracts and serums will do the trick."

A young and beautiful woman creates a sensation at a first night in New York by rising in her seat at the theatre and coolly surveying the audience through her glasses, after the European fashion. Clavering and his friend, Dinwiddie, are immediately interested, and the latter receives a shock, declaring that she is the image of a former society belle, Mary Ogden, though much younger than she should be at that time. He thinks she may be a daughter. Clavering suggests that a society leader, Mrs. Ogdethorpe, be asked to solve the mystery. She consents and calls on the fair unknown, but learns nothing. Clavering follows Mary home from the theatre and aids her to get into the house as she has lost her key. She invites him in and tells him she is Countess Josef Zattiany. He nearly guesses her secret.

READ ON. THE THRILLS COME FAST

"HE knows, and is in some way justified. Madame Zattiany must have your friend's power of attorney. That's positive. And there is no doubt that Countess Zattiany—Mary Ogden—is in some sanitarium in Vienna, hopelessly ill. She let that out."

"Poor Mary! Is that true?"

"I'm afraid it is . . . perhaps . . . that may be it. . . ."

"What are you talking about?"

"When she was mocking my curiosity she suggested that she might have been an actress and won the confidence of Countess Zattiany owing to the resemblance. It struck me as fantastic, but who knows? . . . Still, why should she use the name Zattiany even if your friend did give her the power of attorney . . . unless . . ." he recalled Gora's suggestion, "she is out for a lark."

"Lark? She hasn't tried to meet people. I can't see any point to your idea. Absurd. And that woman is no actress. she is grande dame born and bred."

"I've met some actresses that had very fine manners indeed and also the entree."

"Well, they don't measure up according to my notion. This girl is the real thing."

"They why, in heaven's name, doesn't your Countess Loyos know anything about her? If Madame Zattiany is what she says she is, they must have met in Viennese Society a hundred times. In fact she would have been one of the notable figures at court."

"The only explanation I can think of is that Madame Zattiany is all that claims to be, but that for some reason or other she is not using her own name."

"Ah! That is an explanation. But why—why?"

"There you have me . . . unless . . . Ah!" The familiar glitter came into his eyes and Clavering waited expectantly. This old bird has a marvellous instinct. "I have it! For some reason she had to get out of Europe. Maybe she's hiding from a man, maybe from the government. Zattiany may be one of her husband's names—or her mother's. Of course Mary would be interested in her—with that resemblance—and help her out. She knew her well enough to trust her, and somebody had to represent her here. Of course Trent knows the truth and naturally would keep her secret."

"Another plot for the movies . . . still—it's a plausible enough explanation . . . yes . . . I shouldn't wonder. But from whom is she hiding?"

"Possibly from her husband."

"Her—her——"

"Like as not. Don't murder me. I think you'd better go to Florida and stay there. Best . . . still, marry Anne Goodrich and take her along——"

Clavering had flung himself out of the room.

He charged down Madison avenue, barely escaping disaster at the crossings in the frightful congestion of the hour, he was not only intensely perturbed in mind, but he was in a hurry. His column was unfinished and an article on the "authentic drama" for one of the literary reviews must be delivered on the morrow. In the normal course of events it would have been written a week since.

He was furious with himself. Passionate, impulsive, and often unreasonable, his mind was singularly well-balanced and never before had it succumbed to obsession. He had taken the war as a normal episode in the history of a world dealing mainly in war; not as a strictly personal experience designed by a malignant fate to deprive youth of its illusions, embitter and de-

FLAMING YOUTH By WARNER FABIAN

Intimately Revealing the Life of a Modern and Precocious Society Flapper

WHAT HAD GONE BEFORE.

Mona Fentriss, young, beautiful and the wife of a consulting engineer, has been told by her physician, Bob Osterbourt, who is in love with her, that she has only a short time to live. Mona gives a gay party, telling Pat to go to bed, but the latter borrows a sister's dress, steals downstairs and has "a taste of life." Mona dies and Constance receives a call from Cary Scott, her mother's first admirer. Scott is much taken with Pat. A party is planned for the Dungerfields to christen the new swimming pool. A thunder storm puts out the lights and the guests go into the water without clothes. Dee modestly hesitates on the balcony and then the lights came on, revealing her in a blinding glare. Pat succumbs to Cary Scott. Dee's husband is badly hurt. She refuses to elope with Wollaston. Pat confesses to Dee her relations with Cary. She goes to New York to see Ralph Fentriss' "flossie" and is invited to Edna Carroll's parties. She meets Leo Slezak, and arranges to go to him in Boston but his appearance kills her love. She becomes engaged to Standish, and tells him she has had has a divorce.

an affair with another man. He refuses to desert her, but she breaks the engagement when she hears Scott NOW GO ON WITH THIS ENTHRALLING STORY.

"YES, I know. James has written me. You make life bearable for him. It's rather wonderful of you, Pat."

"I like to go there," she said in disclaimer of his praise. "Will you come with me?"

"Yes, if I may."

For two squares that was his only remark. Pat grew restless. "You're not too conversational," she complained.

"I was thinking," he said quietly, "how very lovely you've grown."

The Old Way and the New

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

"Yes, I heard you were in town [illegible]"

"Who told you?"

"I found a letter when the ship docked. From James."

Pat's eyes snapped with suspicion. "Did Jimmie write you to come back here? From Europe, I mean."

"He cabled."

"Jimmie's a —— Never mind what he is. I'll tell him to his face, when we get there."

But when they got there Mr. Jameson James, a withered old fellow, was very brisk. Well enough to have them come up to his room on yes, that and warm to glad to see Scott again. After a few moments' talk, however, he showed symptoms of weariness. He even hinted that he would be better off to be time without visitors.

"Then he will hold me responsible, not you."

Pat, with the perverseness of her excitement and anticipations, insisted on staying to read to her brother-in-law as usual. This he vetoed outright.

"No, I don't want you. I'm sleepy. Take Scott over to the Knoll for luncheon. He's probably famished. And Dee had to go to town, so there's nothing to be had here. Run along."

Her hand being thus forced, Pat issued the invitation, and she and Scott left the sick room. But they had not reached the front door when she turned and darted upstairs again. Throwing herself down by the cripple's couch she cuddled his head to her bosom and cherished it there.

"Oh, Jimmie! You promise because You old hat! I adore you!" She pressed a swift kiss on his cheek and was gone.

Mr. T. Jameson James made a face at the Devil and chuckled himself to sleep.

Rejoining Scott outside Pat commanded. "Tell me everything you've been doing in the big, big world."

He was unprotestingly obedient, cheerfully impersonal throughout the walk to the Knoll. But never had she been more conscious of the quiet compulsion of his charm. Her arms ached for him. They entered the house by the side door unobtrusively. Pat turned toward the conservatory, but some inexplicable reluctance of feeling checked her.

"No, not there," she said. "Let's go to the library."

No sooner had the door closed behind them than she turned to his embrace not so much yielding to, as offering him, her lips. After the long kiss she stood away from him, but with her hands still clinging upon his shoulders.

"That makes it seem all real again," she breathed.

"Have you grown so far away from me as that, my darling?"

"Well, I was going to marry Monty Standish, you know," she reminded him.

"Yes. Why didn't you?"

"I couldn't. You were in the way."

"Pat! That's what I've feared and dreaded more than——"

"Wait! It isn't what you think. And it isn't all. Before I was engaged to Monty I ran away with a lady to Boston. And you spoiled that."

"I don't understand," he said dully.

"I left him before—well, before anything. Because"—she whirled away from him, flung herself upon the couch, and blew him an airy kiss—"because I happened to think of you at the wrong time. Or perhaps it was the right time. Anyway, his collar gained. Like a sick fish. And you're always set so beautifully. So I beat it." She was all petite gamine now. "You're always getting in my way, Cary. Aren't you? Shame!"

WINCARNIS Quickly Restored Failing Strength

"I take pleasure in testifying as to my experience with Wincarnis, from a positive feeling of gratitude to the compounders of it. Am a man over 70 and for some time past had found myself failing faster, and in a way other than my age alone would seem to account for. Had tried various medicines which seemed to benefit me for a time, but inevitably caused a relapse. Happened to see an advertisement of Wincarnis, and thought I'd try once more. With the first dose I realized that I had found something which "reached the spot" at once.

Have now been using it over a month with very marked benefit in increased strength, better appetite, sound sleep, and greater ability for my work, which taxes my endurance at my age severely

WHO SAID IT AND WHERE

"Absence makes the heart grow fonder."

This is the refrain of an old song called "Fonder and Fonder," set to music by Thomas Haynes Bayly (1797-1839).

"Christmas comes but once a year."

This familiar maxim is taken from the old proverb: "Christmas comes but once a year, and a bawdy part of it."

"To hold a person's nose to the grindstone."

This much used phrase of everyday conversation was common when Heywood published his Proverbs.

"Hanging and wiving go by destiny."

The author of the "School House for Women," published in 1547, must have been somewhat of a woman hater.

"An ill weed grows apace."

Had Bailey had the good sense otherwise attributed, as George Chapman (1557-1634) has stated in "An Humorous Day's Mirth."

"All that is fair is by nature good."

This is a bit of Spenser's self-thought from the "Faerie Queen."

"Every man kneels his Waterloo at last."

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am giving my sweetheart a handsome bag for her birthday present. Would it be proper for me to place a bill in it for luck or would you suggest that the handbag would be sufficient?

M. J. M.

IT would not be good form for you to put a bill in the handbag. The young lady might resent this and that would cast a shadow on your thoughtful gift. Instead of the bill I suggest that you wish her good luck and felicitations by writing your wish in a note or on your visiting card and enclose that in the handbag. This will lend a grace to your gift and there can be no doubt of its taste.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

What favors would be appropriate for an engagement party and also what colors?

A. Z.

ANY stationer will show you all kinds of placecards and favors featuring brides and bride and groom. Shades of pink seem to be the favorite colors for an engagement party. These can be had in the flower decorations, such as sweet peas, arbutus, carnations, roses, and in the heart-shaped cakes and candies. The small, red, heart-shaped boxes filled with peppermint candies are a very effective favor.

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

By ANN LISLE.

"SAY, I'll be after calling Tim myself—and this very minute," broke in Pat. "Why should I be letting a woman do my work? 'Tis a good friend of mine Tom is. I needn't hesitate——"

"I was waiting for that," broke in Jim. "If had an idea you would get busy and call Tom yourself, and tonight, Pat. Well, I hate to tell you this, but he dropped in today to say good-bye. He's off for England on a trip. His boat sails with the tide in the morning. It was a hurry call from his agent in London. Tom said he hadn't time to see all of us."

Jim's eyes met mine. I knew he was sharing my wonder at Tom's sudden departure. But I don't think even Jim knew the spasm of fear which tugged at my heart. For there was a cruel chance that Tom Mason's going to England might undo all Carl Booth had tried to accomplish when he took Daisy away from her temptation—and from Tom. I thought of Irma Warren, who had run away to her sister. Her going might have thrown Tom back on his weak infatuation for Daisy.

But there was no use befuddling my brain with speculations about other folks and their lives. Our own problem was too imminent. I set my shoulders back with a stern grimness and spoke confidently to Pat.

"You mustn't sell the Paradise property at a loss. Neal may come back any minute with the money. It would be too ironical if he came just too late. For he will come—if he's on earth."

"Yes, Alanna," said Pat, gently. Jim's arm tightened about me in a surge of pity. But I had need of my own courage—not their sympathy now. And I cried out.

"But while Neal's gone—his sister must stand by. I—can't fail. I'll go to Loren Haldane in the morning. We're all day tomorrow. Give me my chance—for Neal's sake!"

"I'll give you till noon, Alanna," said Pat, kindly. "There, if you've failed, I'll have to sell the Paradise lot."

It was early in the morning when I walked into the office of Haldane's Magazine. In spite of my grief and worry I had a feeling of buoyancy. I was sure I could count on Loren Haldane's friendship. And I was proud in the expectancy of getting the sixty thousand dollars to take up the option Neal had thrown away—and of getting it from the very man for whom I had been working when I married into the Harrison family.

In her great moment of bitterness, when Phoebe and Neal eloped, Virginia had turned on me with a cry that all this had come from my marrying her brother. I knew she was thinking that the same thing now. Still, however much she hurt me, I couldn't quite blame her. Phoebe's death and the threatened credit of the Dalton-Sturges Company had each its connection with my poor Neal. And this time there was a grim finality in Virginia's grief.

Because there was so much with which Virginia's imagery could not be reproached, I felt I couldn't fail now. The fact that she accused him unjustly made it all the more incumbent on me to act. So I walked into Loren Haldane's private office with just one thought in my mind—

The money—how to get the money.

"Good morning, my dear," Mr. Haldane said, rising with his old world graciousness and holding a chair for me. "This is a pleasure. I wish you'd come looking for a job!"

Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN

SAY "BAYER" when you buy Aspirin

Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer product prescribed by physicians over twenty-two years and proved safe by millions for colds, headache, toothache, earache, neuralgia, lumbago, rheumatism, neuritis, and for pain in general. Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proper directions. Handy boxes of twelve tablets cost few cents. Druggists also sell boxes of 24 and 100. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

Year's Best Selling Novel Reveals Mysterious Return of Youth and Beauty to Old Woman

Idealize it, fill it with cold and acrid contempt for militarism and governments, convert it to pacifism and launch it on a confused but virulent groping after Truth. It was incredible to him that any one who had read history could be guilty of such jejunity, and he attributed it to their bruised but itching egos.

After all, it had been a middle-aged man's war. Not a single military reputation had been made by any one of the millions of young fighters, despite promotions, citations, and medals. Statesmen and military men long past their youth would alone be mentioned in history.

The youth of America was in disillusion rampant into the irrational self-esteem and the mass of them—spring from God knows what. Their egos had been crippled in the face and compressed into a mould; they were subconsciously trying to rebuild it to its original proportions by feeling older than their fathers and showering them with vertical contempt upon those ancient and despicable bonbonnes: "loyalty" and "patriotism." Writers who had remained safely at home had taken the one and become mildly pacifist. It sounded intellectual and it certainly was the fashion.

Clavering, whose ancestors had fought in every war in American history, had enlisted in 1917 with neither sentimentality, enthusiasm, nor resentment. It was idle to vent one's wrath and contempt upon statesmen who could for settle their quarrels with their brains, for the centuries that stood between the present and utter barbarism were too few to have accomplished more than the initial stages of a true civilization. No doubt a thousand years hence these stages would appear as rudimentary as the ages of the Neanderthals had seemed to the twentieth century.

Long Way Off

And as man made progress so did he rarely outstrip it. So far he had done less for himself than for what passed for progress and the higher civilization. Naturally enough, when the Frankenstein monster heaved itself erect and began to run amok with seven leagued boots all the puniies could do was to revert hysterically to Neanderthal methods and use the limited amount of brains the intervening centuries had given them, to scheme for victory. A thousand years hence the Frankensteins might be buried and man's brain gigantic.

Then and then only would civilization be perfected, and the savagery and asininity of war a blot on the history of his race to which no man cared to refer. But that was a long way off. When a man's country was in danger there was nothing to do but fight. Nobody offered. And fight without growling and whining.

Clavering had liked army discipline, sitting in filthy trenches, wounds, hospitals, and killing his fellow men as little as any decent man, but what had these surly grudgers expected? To fight when they felt like it, sleep in feather beds, and shoot at targets? Disillusionment? Patriotism murdered by Truth! One would think they were fighting the first war in history.

It was not the war they took seriously, but themselves.

Ego Unbruised

Like other men of his class and traditions, Clavering had emerged from the war hoping it would be the last for a long time but with his ego undimmed. His point of view of life in general undistorted, and a quick assessment of "fighting memories." His chief surviving memory was a hideous boredom. One more war had gone into history. That he had taken no active, finitesimal part in it instead of reading an account of it by some accomplished historian was merely the accident of his years. And as he could see, he was precisely the man he was before he was sent to France and he had only unmitigated contempt for these "war reactions" in men sound in limb and with no derangement of the ductless glands.

As for the women, when they began to talk their intellectual pacifism, he told them that their new doctrine of non-resistance he came them ill, but as even the most advanced were still women, considered, was not open to any one desired. Their pacifism, however, when not more effectively negative by the fascination of the moment—was due to an unconscious fear of seeing the world depopulated of men, or of repressed testosterone, or perhaps for being females and unable to fight. He was extremely rude.

And now this inferior woman had completely thrown him off his balance. He could think of nothing else. His mind was undisciplined, his psychic nerves all a-quiver, his appetite lost, and all sensible and although he hourly since nothing would have given him more exquisite satisfaction than to write a paper on the authenticity of the latest cavalier drama, he would now be quite incapable of concentrating his mind upon a third rate problem.

He had left the romantic knight ready to break a lance—dozen of them—in any case the world owed him a duel for having denounced her as an impostor. True, she seemed more anxious to take care of herself, she was very beautiful, very blonde, very unprotected, and in such a sinful sound sleep as to be almost disarming. He had thought himself a ruthless sort of chevalier, but somehow exerted and not had succeeded in putting his self-control, his self-respect, his self-absorption, that she was not a romantic and pleasing object to look upon.

When Gora Dwight had promised to tell him into these mysteries of her past, he had been sure that he would be able to keep his head, that he would be in command of the situation, that he would be able to keep his head, that he would be in command of the situation, that he would be able to keep his head, that he would be in command of the situation,

The young man who had just returned from a season at college was holding forth on the services rendered by science. "So are you," he concluded, "to measure you." He said to a old farmer. "Now the time is coming when you will be able to tell the weather forecast, find acres of circles and—" "And carry all the corn in the other," answered the farmer.

St. Louis, Aug. 1—George Sisler says he has high hopes of playing with the St. Louis Americans before the season ends. He added that his vision was much improved, and that he was able to hit a golf ball with regularity. Persons who have watched Sisler on the links say the quality of his game indicates no evidence of seriously impaired vision.

Lynch Tells How to Score Knockout

By JOE LYNCH

My real knockout punch is a right hand cross, but with some opponents I have used various others to bring it off to advantage. Knockouts are all very well in a real fight, but I never try to knock out a youngster. My aim is always to keep myself in such shape that I can go the limit with any opponent. When I am in my best condition I am confident of my ability to stop any man in the world.

My training [illegible] I am careful to get plenty of sleep. I box several rounds each day, and I do a lot of roadwork. I keep my body in trim by rubbing myself down with a towel after a shower or a bath.

[illegible] I am careful to eat plenty of nourishing food, but I do not overeat. I drink milk and eat fruit. I do not smoke or drink liquor.

The best place to train is in the country, where there are no temptations. After a fight I take a long vacation. I get all the weight I can on to my body, and then I start in training for the next fight. I depend upon golf more than anything else to get me into shape.

Besides the right hand cross at the jaw, I sometimes try to sock an opponent on the left hook. For me I look out for my opponent's style, and knowledge of the game. No two fighters are the same, and the style of fighting must be changed to suit the opponent.

It pays a fighter to be a student of the game. I consider business man as well as a puncher. My punching has been my best asset since entering the ring. It was the championship and helped me for me last Summer.

The most skillful blend in cigarette history

Something happened back in 1903 to change the smoking habits of many thousands of men.

That something was the introduction of Fatima—the original Turkish Blend cigarette.

Many Turkish Blends have since come and gone, but notice that Fatima has stayed.

For twenty years, Fatima has not been equalled for mildness, smoothness and untiring good taste.

Fatima is unquestionably the most skillful blend in cigarette history.

MR. GALLAGHER AND MR. SHEAN

THE Boston American awards each week an original Gallagher & Shean drawing to the reader who sends in the best Gallagher & Shean lyric.

One is needed for publication in this column every day, and on Saturday the selection of the best one in made and a drawing is handed the winner.

Today's selection, one of the six from which the winner will be selected this week, is by Mrs. Delia V. Brock, No. 62 Arlington street, Haverhill, Mass.

Oh Mr. Gallagher, Oh, Mr. Gallagher,
Once on a time I had a lot of dough.
Then I played too strong on wheat
And my ruin was complete,
Now in the U. S. Navy I shall go.
Oh Mr. Shean, Oh Mr. Shean,
This is the sort of thing to which I lean
How my whole heart craves
For a life amid the waves,
Sailorboy, Mr. Gallagher?

Chester's Chuckles

By Chester C. Conner

DON'T scold your wife for lying when she's talking about you. You might feel worse if she told the truth.

The recording angel kindly closes his ears when a woman tells her husband how fine she thinks he is.

A man gets all the heaven he deserves right here on earth if his wife doesn't nag.

When a man sits down he turns on tenpers. When a woman sits down she turns her skirts down.

The elephant is the only animal we know of that can bite off its own nose to spite his face.

One swallow may not make a Summer, but it has made more than one bird sing.

Man is made out of dust. Dust is always dry.

The degree of a fisherman's lie depends on the length of his arms.

Many a dentist agrees with mother robin that the world is just one grand succession of open mouths.

Grandad's motto was Do and Dare—grandson's is Put and Take.

The village blacksmith was pounding his anvil at 6 a. m. At 9 a. m. his grandson is still pounding—his ear.

Susie has a new job vamping at the shoe factory.

The pronunciation of vase depends on its cost.

Some folks are dead a long time before the undertaker gets them.

You can't get fat eating your own words.

Your wife would be a wealthy woman if she had all the things you have promised her.

Many a miss makes a hit.

A tailor with a large stock hates to see it rain coats.

The fires of love and a careless husband go out when they shouldn't.

WITH THE EXPECTATION OF THOSE WHO LOVE YOU.

There is someone in this world who would like to see you succeed. There is someone in this world who thinks a lot of you and wishes you the best that can come to a human being.

Sometime, when worldliness, when all other friends have failed.

You have, at least one friend whom you could call upon. Are you getting the pleasure this one friend?

You may be doing fairly well, but not as well as this one person believes you can do.

Are you doing as well as you know yourself to be able to do?

You have ambition, and desire to get to the top, but the grind is weak.

Then ask you not to work to keep pace with that one person's optimism? It may be your romance, a glance or a little boy or girl of your own.

You're probably living, expecting and to make good. If she has good looks, she could with the shoulder to cry on who say you would a failure to her.

Are you not going to honor her memory by making her address good?

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

At least lines of every-day business and financial interest are touched on in our standard note the outlook.

Much material news is being spread to some of the winnowing services for this month, presumably because it is generally shared by men of affairs.

The predominating sentiment is responsible markets, so far as I can gather and analyze it, would best be described as cautiously optimistic.

The majority of our leaders look for better, not worse, business when the Fall opens. But they do not overstock themselves with their plans. They are not cocksure that things will greatly improve. They reason that a change in their attitude might be premature, but they prefer not to miss any available risks for opportunities.

* * *

Now, as a matter of fact, the widely prevalent attitude constitutes one of the most reassuring and encouraging features of the whole situation. It makes for low inventories all around. It tends to strengthen credit and the position of our business generally. It paves the way for moderate and marked increases in activity as soon as there is a definite note of expansion.

It is largely because the business community is afraid of too much rise, is unwilling to become overpowered, hesitates to add to its large volume of commitments, that I do not look for any boom in business during the Fall and Winter months.

* * *

Perhaps you will be interested in some of the statements made to me by recognized leaders in different important industries.

Daniel C. Jackling, undoubted leader of the world's copper industry, is no passionate believer of inflation. He says: "I would not like to see him and get this out of him."

"The copper business is in a very satisfactory condition as far as the present is concerned. The stocks of refined copper in the hands of consumers are the lowest in proportion to delivery since 1915. Stocks have been kept, exceeding during the year.

"The domestic consumption during the last six months has been unparalleled and greatly exceeds the record for any previous period, the deliveries for domestic consumption having been greater than in any production in the United States from North and South America when fifty per cent of our production was exported. Exports for the last six months were at about the average of 1922, notwithstanding conditions in Europe.

"Manufacturing plants are very busy, and making as large a production as labor conditions will permit.

"The demand for all kinds of manufactured copper and brass continues very large, and the manufacturing plants of the Anaconda company and its subsidiaries have on hand as large an amount of future business as it is reasonable to book.

"I look to see the consumption of copper continue at a very satisfactory rate for at least the balance of this year, and think the increasing needs for copper and brass, particularly for electrical use, will make continuous good business for some time ahead."

Next take another very important industry, an industry which has been grown to magnificent but adequately appreciated by the public. Read how E. M. Herr, president of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, feels about the outlook:

"The electrical industry is passing through a period of unusual activity in practically all departments.

"A large amount of generating and transmission apparatus is now in process of manufacture, and as this class of electrical apparatus always requires several months for production during the next few months machines of great horsepower capacity for the production of electric current will be installed and placed in operation.

"The present favorable banking and credit situation, as well as the large amount of money available, will permit the continuation of activity in the electrical field, the legitimate development of which was greatly delayed by the World War. It will require some time to catch up with this delayed development, which the pressure of the necessities and demands of the public is bringing about.

"In addition to this deferred development and domestic lines the electrification of railroads has been practically at a standstill during the war period, and should soon resume its activity also.

"From the foregoing you will see that on the whole the electrical industry gives promise of a continuation of prosperous conditions for at least six months, and I believe for a considerably longer period. Because of its youth and rapid development this industry is fortunate in being in a different position from that of some of the older and more thoroughly established industries in the country and therefore will probably enjoy a longer period of prosperity than those more thoroughly established."

Yesterday's session was the most critical since the reorganization. It was for testing the temperament of the so-called "big money" interests. I don't feel called upon to make any announcements for guessing the silent acts of the powers.

RUBBER HITS NEW BOTTOM QUOTATION

Extensible news from President Harding's bedside accounted for the flood of favorable notices which were executed at the outset on the New York Stock Exchange. They gave the market a strong boost and it was not long before the buying orders were in excess of many of the offerings.

The same was of course true in the Curb market, where the activity was unprecedented. The Associated Press ticker service was overwhelmed with orders and was unable to keep up with the demand. Transactions were recorded in many issues at prices which were not quoted on the floor.

Yesterday's market was the most active since the week of June 4, when 4,000,000 shares changed hands. Today's turnover was 3,500,000 shares.

KIDDIES CRY FOR PAPA TO RETURN

"Where's Papa?" says little Mary McCool, three years old. Mother can't answer so she weeps.

Mary McCool

"Isn't it funny that Papa doesn't come home to see baby, Mamma," insists Mary.

Ten weeks ago Charles McCool, thirty-one years old, of No. 244 Meridian street, East Boston, disappeared.

Today his mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Critchfield, asked the Boston American to help locate him.

McCool's pretty young wife be-

Mrs. E. McCool Charles McCool came a mother for the second time four days ago.

"He left my poor daughter with out a penny," said Mrs. Critchfield. The McCools have been married four years.

Burglar Alarm Mistake

Seven patrolmen of City Hall avenue police station responded to a burglar alarm at the Lee, Higginson & Co. offices at No. 40 State street, only to find that crossed wires caused the alarm.

Honor Bids Us Help Stop French Brutality

George M Reynolds, Chicago banker, returning from a six months' study of financial conditions abroad, says flatly:

France has not the slightest intention of paying one cent of her war debt to the United States.

He confirms that wealth in France is boastfully dodging taxes while the thrifty peasants are let off lightly because the politicians fear to impose on them any tax like our income tax.

Yet France finds money to loan to Poland and Rumania for keeping thousands of gunmen on disarmed Germany's flank, while French troops occupy and terrorize the Saar and Ruhr.

Virtually, it is our money which is maintaining this militarist conspiracy against the peace of the world.

It is money collected from the American people on the false representation that it would "end war."

To put down German autocracy our money was borrowed and is now being used to support French militarism.

Moreover, by its misuse in the maintenance of this military menace, it is causing incalculable additional losses to American farmers, American exporters, American shippers, American producers of all kinds, as well as to the producers in neutral Europe—Great Britain, Germany and France itself.

Truly, it is time to bring such costly madness to a halt.

The lead which Premier Baldwin of Great Britain, supported by Italy and by unofficial sentiment in Belgium and the neutral European states, has taken to achieve this end is entitled to at least sympathetic endorsement by public opinion in the United States.

We think that it is entitled to more.

Upon an honest debtor doing his best under misfortune the American people would not press with severity, but rather look for new ways to help.

But when the debtor is contemptuous of his debt, resentful of kindly counsel, scornful of the dictates of humanity, and bent on a policy of devastation, the case is different.

As the chief creditor of such a France, which American money and American man-power saved from utter defeat, the government of the United States has rights which cannot be ignored.

Its moral right and duty is to remind the debtor of its violation of the terms upon which the joint enemy laid down his arms.

Lest we and France forget, recall the fact that on December 5, 1918, the German chancellor asked President Wilson to summon the belligerants to a peace conference on the basis of the fourteen points.

Wilson laid the German request before the supreme council of the Allies. That body declared, subject to two reservations, its "willingness to make peace on the terms laid down in the address of the President (of the United States) to Congress on January 8, 1918, and the principles of settlement enunciated in his subsequent address."

The Allies thus bound themselves not to destroy the German people but only to force the surrender of the autocratic, militaristic German government.

The Germans at our command overthrew their autocratic government, set up in its place a democratic government, surrendered arms, territory, ships, colonies and all means of defense and relief upon our honor. In five years they have paid five times the indemnity exacted by Germany of France in 1870 in a war which France itself caused. They are willing to pay as much more as an international commission of experts finds them able to pay. Had France or Belgium declared in 1918 the purposes they are now relentlessly carrying out against England's and Italy's protest, the armistice papers would certainly not have borne an American signature.

For the American people in 1918 did not meditate treachery to the German people, were not trying to win them by false pretenses.

They believed then, as they believe now, that the German people should pay to the limit of their capacity for the ruin their armies wrought.

But they did not then, and they certainly do not now, wish to see the German people enslaved by French militarists, who, under the pretense of seeking reparations, are, in fact, covetously and brutally seizing the industrial heart of an unarmed neighbor.

We have a right of a creditor and the right of an honorable soldier to speak some plain Yankee words to the militaristic France.

Soldiers for Husbands?

Too Fierce a Race

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

General Pershing advises young girls to marry soldiers, especially those who have been volunteers.

To marry a hero is fine. But if all girls took Pershing's advice many would remain single, and Nature's plan would be changed. In the past, the heroes rushed out eager to fight at every alarm, and in every war a great many were killed. The girls had to marry what was left, thus the race became gentler, the canine tooth smaller, the chin less powerfully projecting. The fighters were killed off by their own courage, and the gentler stay-at-homes were left to carry on the race. That was hard on the fighters and on the girls that love big, brave, 100 per cent. he-men. But it did diminish fighting.

Action on Coal Needed NOW

A representative of the Boston American suggests some subjects for editorial comment.

He says, "Please get some action NOW in the impending coal shortage. Don't wait until Winter and then substitute statistics for coal, as was done last year."

We have several times referred to the danger of a coal shortage and have urged the Mayor to organize the other cities of Massachusetts and New England for independent New England action in the crisis. Commissioner of Necessaries of Life Hultman says there is not much danger of a coal shortage, but we want neither the scarcity of coal nor the famine prices.

"Put some street signs in Boston," suggests the writer, also. It is asserted that if we had good street signs the traffic police could perform their duty very much easier and much more effectively, and Boston's narrow, crooked streets would be made a little more tolerable to the traveler. This is obviously true.

WOMAN RUNS ON UNIQUE PLATFORM

TOLEDO, Ohio, Aug. 1—"If I get to be Mayor I would give each policeman a week of being Chief. It's too bad police can't take part in politics. I suppose they're afraid of some of the officials."

This is one of the unwritten planks in the platform of Carrie Miller Barnes, who has filed papers for the office of Mayor. Mrs. Barnes is the first woman to seek the office in Toledo. Her written platform is equally interesting.

Mrs. Barnes is the mother of five "kids" as she calls them, and a grandmother.

THE VOICE OF NEW ENGLAND

No Attention Paid to Anonymous Communications

Five Cent Fares

Editor Boston American:

Why can't the favored road devise a new plan for handling five-cent fares on their regular lines. Under their present scheme a person pays the full ten-cent fare and is given a return check. Many people never use that return check, simply because they have no occasion to do so. That gives the road a clear profit of a nickel. It is safe to say that the aggregate profit is considerable.

Why not figure out a plan whereby five-cent passengers will pay five cents and no more. A nickel is a nickel to the passenger as well as the road. The conductor could make a refund as the passenger was leaving the car, if the passenger put a dime in the box on entering.

Beach Petting Parties

Editor Boston American:

I have been reading of the efforts of some of Lynn's "elite" trying to stop petting parties on Lynn beaches. Pretty soon lovers will have to see each other only in the lighted parlor, with the whole family sitting around, looking on and listening. No doubt there may be some "petters" who carry things too far, but I'll bet that many of those against whom the "better than thou" element is waging war are honest men and women, who can find no other suitable spot to say their "sweet nothings."

PRESIDENTS, LIKE ARMIES, TRAVEL ON THEIR STOMACHS

By Herbert Kaufman

THE late Captain Archibald Butt, who used to accompany President Taft around the country, once suggested to the writer that the jerkwater towns which entertain our public men on their continental junkets should be tactfully advised to serve the customary food of the district instead of loading banquet tables with poor imitations of French cuisine.

President Harding, prostrated at San Francisco by an attack of ptomaine poisoning, may have been infected by coppery crabs, but it is not likely that fresh shellfish would have provoked such serious trouble if his intestinal system were not on the verge of rebellion.

Shakespeare understood how "unquiet meals make ill digestions," and centuries before, Pliny wisely observed that "this huddling of many meats upon another of diverse tastes is pestiferous."

History's ink is filled with gastric juices. A bad stomach inspires doubtful decisions. No man is wiser than his cook.

They're Both Right

The story of the pedestrian who found a smashed automobile on an empty road and lay down beside the victims of the wreck so that he might also collect accident damages pops to mind when Western manufacturers inform rural customers that industry and agriculture must take a united stand against wage-boosting labor.

John M. Green tells the farmer that unions are equally responsible with crop surpluses for present crises.

According to his figures, should a rancher employ a bricklayer, a plasterer, a painter, a plumber and a carpenter and pay them the equivalent, prevalent Manhattan tariffs, the five journeymen would receive 762 eggs, 171½ bushels of corn, 69 pounds of chicken, 32 pounds of butter and a 175-pound hog for a single day's combined services.

But it doesn't work out that way if Senator Brookhart knows what he's talking about.

By the time intervening middlemen have added their extravagant charges, the five would be lucky to come off with an omelet, a slice of ham, a boiled fowl, a pan of muffins and a pat of butter per diem apiece.

To his way of thinking, neither producer nor mechanic is a profiteer. Both are helpless pawns of economic circumstances, which may only be improved by digging new and shorter channels of distribution. Next!

Doctors, as Usual, Disagree

Other doctors disagree, too. Metropolitan Life Insurance physicians advise us to worry as we grow fat, and the Surgeon-General's Office instructs citizens to consult medico when losing flesh.

The co-discoverer of insulin believes that expensive animal intermediaries won't be needed to procure essential anti-diabetic qualities from vegetables, and offers hope of a cheap and effective extract from onions and other garden greens.

One French pathologist traces cancer to household pets, and another assures that he has literally run the elusive parasite to earth. The malady is spread by uncooked vegetables, not dogs and cats.

A third more or less distinguished scientist launches the theory that health and longevity are controlled by twenty-four varieties of salt. Sprinkle your viands with his collection of seasonings and defy death. They're all guessing.

Make the Punishment Fit the Crime

What we need, above all else, are sterner remedies for recklessness and cruelty.

One hundred persons were injured and fifty killed at grade crossings on Sunday alone. Careless chauffeurs are the undertaker's best friends. "Stop, look and listen" signs aren't read by spooning, drunken and smart-Alec drivers.

Thirty-five miles an hour is the pace that kills. Increasing automobile mortalities foredestine the installation of devices to regulate at least the speed of city cars.

Strict license rules and jail sentences, NOT FINES, for joyriders will also tend to check street slaughter.

Penal codes need revision in more than one respect. Texas hasn't a statute on its books drastic enough to deal with the El Paso stepmother who forces a thirteen-year-old girl to spend ten years in an open pigpen. The child, dwarfed by the experience, to the mentality and size of a toddler, doesn't remember when her meals weren't passed through six bars.

Justice wouldn't be outraged if that woman were condemned to ten years of like treatment.

Food for Reflection

Civilization is an endless struggle between ignorance and enlightenment. The protective and beneficial influences are suspected and rejected before common acceptance. Arkwright was stoned and his first spinning-jennies wrecked by the very weavers who were later to bless his name.

Mississippi hill-billies similarly carry on War on State officials and try to dynamite their vats when they attempt to save diseased cattle by dipping the herds.

Work is proceeding under protection of Federal machine-gun battalions. And these folk have an equal voice in the government of the United States. The personnel of Congress shows it.

Fourteen thousand employes of the Endicott-Johnson Shoe Company receive a week's vacation with $615,000 pay. The corporation figures a loss in profits of $200,000 as a consequence. A mere matter of bookkeeping, which will later be calculated in annual overhead and added to manufacturing costs.

Retail prices carry the burden of all industrial philanthropy. Business takes the credit and the public foots the bill.

Poincare is again negotiating with Washington to make the payment of war debts contingent upon reparations collections. France prepares to settle with us as Germany delivers on indemnity account.

Anybody reading Paris papers wouldn't suspect that the United States had devoted millions of dollars and millions of men to the defeat of the Kaiser and the rescue of Europe from Prussian domination. Otherwise frane and mark would long since have traded places.

But income taxes, veterans' hospitals and graveyards remind how America paved battlefields with gold and blood, abandoned claims to colonial fruits of victory, fed, clothed and rebuilt throughout devastated regions, only to reap ingratitude and impudence where our armies sowed glory.

Food for a month's reflection in a five-minutes' survey of the news.

THE HELPING HAND

Do Not Inclose Stamps. Letters Will Not Be Answered Personally. No Attention Paid to Telephone Calls. No Names Are Published.

Children Need Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a mother of four children, three girls and one boy. The girls are fourteen months old, and four and six, and the boy is three. My husband has been out on the strike at the shoe factory nine or ten weeks and don't know when he is going back. I would be so happy if you could get clothes for my children and me. I am only twenty-five years old and wear size 38 in clothes and size 4 shoes. MRS. F. A. K.

Willing to Earn Coal

Editor Helping Hand:

Seeing all the good work you are doing, I wonder if you would help me, as I have four children and my husband is not making very much. I find it impossible to save money to get coal, so would you please try and get me some work evenings from seven o'clock cleaning offices or anything. I will do my best at anything. M. B. S.

Please Send Full Name

Will the person who signed the initials "Miss E. M. N." and a box number in Allerton, please send her full name and address? Letters addressed to the box number given are returned unclaimed. May we again ask our readers to sign full names always? They are never published.

Offers Clothes; Wants Books

Editor Helping Hand:

I have some tiny baby clothes that I would be glad to send to some one. Also a thin light voile dress, size 40. I am a young mother, 600 miles from home. I get so lonesome. Would some of the readers send me some books or magazines to read? I will gladly pay postage. I am not very well and can't get out much.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of Mrs. M. A., who expects the clothes soon, and of Mrs. P., who sent the material for the other clothing.

Will Help Mrs. D. G.

Editor Helping Hand:

Will you please send me the address of Mrs. D. G.? I think I may be able to help her. If she has been supplied please send me some other deserving person's address. MRS. McC.

Thank you. Mrs. D. G. has been supplied, so we are very glad the address of Mrs. C. who is in need of clothing.

5 Children on $20 a Week

Editor Helping Hand:

Can you find any help for me? I am in dire need of clothing and also some clothing for myself, as I have five small children to try and keep on $20 a week. MRS. H.

Has Baby Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a few things for a baby girl a year old and a few things for a new baby. If you would send me some poor woman's address within ten or fifteen miles I would take them to her. Also have a dress or two that would fit a girl sixteen. Hope some time I will be able to do more. MRS. W. L. A.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of H. G. B., who has one baby and expects another soon, and of Miss A. M., who wears size 16 and is in need of clothing.

Clothes for Mrs. C. M. W.

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a woman's brown suit, size 44, a fur neckpiece, some things for a girl twelve, a pair of boots, size six, and another, size four, and some other things of the same description which I will be glad to send to anyone who can use them. MRS. A. R.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of Mrs. C. M. W., who will be very grateful for these things.

A Crib and Toys

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a crib I will gladly send to Mrs. D. H. on receipt of her address, and also some toys for A. B. C.

Thank you. Mrs. D. H. has been supplied, so we have sent you the address of Mrs. , who writes that they have two little babies and no place for them to sleep. The address of A. B. C. has been sent you.

Too Old for Hard Work

Editor Helping Hand:

Is there any one of the Helping Hand ladies who have any pieces for making holders, such as pieces of gingham or percale. I would be glad to get them, and also pieces of ticking if it is old. I wash it and it is good. I am obliged to do something to help to make a living. I have trouble with my feet, so I can't go out to earn money. I would gladly pay postage and also give some holders in return. I am sixty years old, so nearly too old to do laborious work, I think. MRS. M. E. P.

Willing to Repay Help

Editor Helping Hand:

My husband is in the hospital and I have seven children, girls, four, six, eight, ten, twelve and fourteen and a boy nine. I would like clothes and shoes for them, or anything to cut down and make over. If I can do something to repay any help I will be glad to. MRS. J. E. F.
